PLAN TO PROTEST SEATING MAYFIELD IN THE U. S. SENATE

REPUBLICAN CHAIRMAN IS IN WASHINGTON IN THIS CONNECTION.

WILL CONFER WITH WASHINGTON LEADERS

Newberry Case Figures Largely in Probable Outcome Of Contest.

By CHAS. S. HAYDEN
Washington Correspondent Wichita Daily Times.

WASHINGTON Dec 2—R B. Creager of Brownsville chairman of the republican state committee in Texas arrived Saturday in Washington and next week will open the fight of republican and anti-klan forces to have Earle B. Mayfield ousted as senator. Mr Creager declined to be interviewed but nevertheless it became known that the Texas republicans intend to find out through conferences how the majority senators view the plan to deny Senator-elect Mayfield his seat

Something of an understanding already has been reached and it is stated that the republican leaders in the senate welcome this case from Texas as a means of removing the Newberry stain from the party. It has been proposed that the charges against Mayfield should center on the alleged excessive expenditures made in his behalf during the primary campaign. Senators who voted against seating former Senator Newberry will stress this issue while those who voted to seat Newberry will contend that Mayfield should be ousted on the ground that the refusal to permit George N. B. Peddy's name on the ballot as the republican candidate vitiated the election. Alleged membership in the Ku Klux Klan will not be made a direct issue.

In addition to sounding out sentiment on the Mayfield case it is known that Mr. Creager while in Washington intends to make inquiries as to the novel system of federal judgeship, several postmasterships hanging fire and the probable successor to the late Judge W P Ramsey as federal reserve agent for the Dallas bank

Travis County to Have Lighthouses At Bad Crossings

SIMPLE FUNERAL SERVICE IS HELD FOR CONGRESSMAN

WASHINGTON, Dec 2—Funeral service, simple, as he lived, were held in the hall of the house today for James R Mann who for upwards of 25 years had exerted there his great influence as a leader of 60d people

The president, the vice president, the cabinet, the supreme court, the diplomatic corps men representing the heads of the army and navy, the senate and house and a host of friends, high and humble, joined in paying a tribute such as is paid to few men nowadays in public life.

Tonight the body of the house veteran, and warrior of many a legislative battle, was on its way home to Chicago for burial, under escort of a congressional delegation composed of his colleagues from Illinois and friends closest to him in his work

There was no eulogy by his colleagues—merely a sermon in which his service was briefly recalled—by the Rev. James E Freeman rector of the church of the Epiphany

President Harding sat directly across the aisle from former President Taft, now chief justice of the United States, both of them close friends of the dead republican leader Sitting far back in the chamber, Uncle Joe Cannon long an intimate friend of Mr Mann let the tears run down his cheeks unchecked.

After the benediction colleagues marched by the open coffin in silent farewell.

PRINCE OF GREECE SENTENCE INVOLVES A LIFE-LONG EXILE

ALLEGED HE DISOBEYED ORDERS OF GENERAL IN TURK WAR.

SEVERE RESTRICTIONS PLACED ON DEFENSE

Permitted Only Five Witnesses to Deny the Charge of Court.

ATHENS, Dec. 2—Prince Andrew of Greece, brother of the deposed King Constantine, tonight was sentenced to life-long exile and military degradation for having disobeyed orders during the recent war with Turkey when he had a military command.

The verdict came late tonight after Prince Andrew had been on trial all day before a high military tribunal. If was considered that he had a narrow escape from death, as the court might have imposed the extreme penalty on the strength of evidence introduced.

The judgment of military degradation means that he must have his buttons and badges cut off in the presence of a regiment of troops

Depositions read at the court-martial agreed that Andrew had disobeyed orders during the Asia Minor campaign when the Greeks were routed by Mustapha Kemal's forces.

The prince was exceedingly nervous when the first questions were fired at him, his replies were choked with emotion as he answered the revolutionary inquisitors.

It was only after some time that he recovered his sang froid and was able to answer the court calmly

With his wife, Princess Alice watching and amid the solemnity caused by the knowledge of the terrible fate of the five cabinet ministers who had passed before him, the scene at the court-martial was dramatic in the extreme.

The prince was cheered for a very long time, and lengthy depositions were read condemning him The fact that a death sentence was not imposed is believed due, in part at least, to the furore created by the execution of the former premier and other officials who were shot with him and the fact that Andrew is related by marriage to the Mountbattens, a powerful house connected with British royalty.

PRINCE ANDREW OF GREECE ON TRIAL FOR HIS LIFE

By United Press

ATHENS, Dec 2—A man who might have been king went on trial for his life here today before a revolutionary tribunal

The man is Prince Andrew of Greece, brother of King Constantine an exile and uncle of George, who reigns now, but is virtually a prisoner in his palace Prince Andrew is charged with treason It is alleged he disobeyed an order of General Papayoulas during the recent war with Turkey. If convicted he will be executed After Constantine abdicated, Andrew was suggested as king, however George was selected instead Then Andrew was jailed by the revolutionaries

Many of his friends fear that the trial will be a farce designed merely to speed him to death Severe restrictions were placed on the defense When the extraordinary war council went into session the presiding officer, General Vlachopoulos announced Andrew would be permitted only five witnesses to deny the charge The court room was jammed to the doors as proceedings opened

Many royalists were present and they made no pretense of concealing their support of Andrew. They whispered with him. Sentries at the doors gave the proceedings a grim tone As the trial got under way reports were being received here of revolts and disorders, a heritage of the same Turk war which brought Prince Andrew into court and sent Constantine flying There were unconfirmed reports of pro-Constatine uprisings at Patras Misolonghi and Corfu, where the British flag was said to have been hoisted by mobs protesting the recent execution of five former cabinet ministers in Athens Fift, persons are dead in Smyrna, following clashes between Greeks and Mistapha Kemal's forces there, according to unconfirmed dispatches

GOVERNOR-ELECT PUTS BAN ON FORMALITIES

TOPEKA, KAN, Dec 2—Governor-elect Jonathan M Davis will have no frills at his inauguration January 9

The new governor tonight stated that he did not propose to sanction the spending of a lot of money on decorations and flowers and that he did not want any special invitation sent out "I want everybody to feel welcome to come," Governor Davis said.

DEMOCRATS WIN IN SENATE FIGHT OVER ANTI-LYNCHING BILL

REPUBLICAN CAUCUS AGREES TO ABANDON MEASURE COMPLETELY.

EFFICIENTLY CONDUCTED FILIBUSTER DOES WORK

Tactics of Democrats Threatened More Than a Thousand Presidential Nominations.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2—Success crowned the filibuster of seven democrats against the Dyer anti-lynching bill today when republican senators in party caucus voted to abandon the measure completely.

The republican majority acted after the democrats by what is generally conceded to have been one of the most efficiently conducted filibusters in the history of the senate had prevented the transaction of any business for the fourth consecutive legislative day. The obstructionist tactics of the democrats moreover were threatening more than a thousand presidential nominations which if unconfirmed by Monday noon the special session ends must be again submitted.

The republican caucus was preceded by a conference attended by Senators Lodge of Massachusetts the republican leader Curtis, Kansas, the republican whip, and Shortridge, California, in charge of the Dyer bill Senator Shortridge, who had been unmovable throughout the filibusters, was understood to have agreed at this conference to allow the fate of the bill to be decided by a majority caucus.

The question of abandoning the measure which was passed by the house last session was debated in the caucus for two hours, it is understood a small minority holding out for a continuation of the fight The final decision, however, was to direct Senator Lodge to inform the democratic leaders that the bill would be pushed no further either at the special session on at the regular session convening Monday. This means the death of the legislation which the democrats have attacked as a force bill and as unconstitutional

The decision, republican leaders said after the caucus, will permit confirmation of a large number of the pending nominations at a session of the senate convening at 10 o'clock Monday, two hours in advance of the meeting of congress in regular session Among these nominations is that of Pierce Butler of Minnesota, to be an associate justice of the supreme court

Majority and minority leaders alike were agreed tonight that the filibuster thus brought to an end by the republican caucus decision will take a place as one of the most notable in senate history. It has differed from the previous filibusters in that it involved no long speeches democrats having utilized the usual routine action of approving the journal. Under senate rules no business can be transacted until the journal or minutes of the previous session have been approved and democrats took advantage of this rule presenting amendments, demanding quorum calls and requesting the ayes and noes on every question brought up

STATE SUIT TESTS VALIDITY OF GROSS RECEIPTS TAX LAW

AUSTIN Dec 2—The suit brought by the state against the Humble Oil and Pipe Line company for the recovery of approximately $45,000 in gross receipt taxes and penalties today was set for hearing next Tuesday in the Travis county district court The suit will be a test case of the validity of the gross receipts tax law

Attorney General Keeling tonight announced he will file immediately a motion to dissolve the temporary injunction obtained by the Texas Pipe Line company in the federal court at San Antonio which restrains state officials from attempting to recover similar taxes from that company

Taxes from oil and gas companies amounting to more than $1,000,000 are involved in the constitutionality of the law, state officials said.

Youth Kidnaped At Milwaukee Is Found In Gainesville, Texas

Special to the Times

GAINESVILLE, TEXAS Dec 2—Frank Sanborn, age 17, who according to a statement by his brother, John Sanborn, 3661 South Michigan avenue Chicago, was kidnaped by his father while attending public school in Milwaukee some four years ago, and whose whereabouts, with one exception, had been a mystery to the family since that time, was located in Gainesville Friday night by the Chicago man and local police Another brother resides at 128 Locust street, Milwaukee.

The abduction followed a family disruption and although efforts were made to induce the sheriff at Milwaukee to apprehend the father and son when the family learned what had been done, the next heard them were in Seattle. Wash During the four years since that time the family had received no word of the missing couple until two weeks ago when Frank wired to his brother in Milwaukee that he was in Amarillo Texas, and needed assistance An aged man, presumed by relatives to be the boy's father but who gives the name of Rowland, informed Frank of his brother's address This led finally to the Chicago man coming here in answer to a letter from Frank written from Oswalt, Okla, after he left Amarillo

The abducted youth claims to have been blacked in the oil fields at Burkburnett, Texas. A blow on the head rendering him temporarily incompetent and blotting out all recollection of his life previously He says the aged man who gave him his brother's address at Amarillo also knew him at Burkburnett and told him he had relatives in Wisconsin The kidnaped youth claim to have no recollection of his father or his home.

He will return to Chicago with his brother, John

ASK REMOVAL OF COUNTY ATTORNEY TULSA, OKLAHOMA

PETITION IS FILED BY THE ASSISTANT ATTORNEY GENERAL OF STATE.

FAILURE TO ENFORCE THE LAW IS ALLEGED

Decision Not Expected Before His Term of Office Has Expired.

By United Press.

TULSA OKLA, Dec. 2—Removal from office of W. F Seaver county attorney, was asked in a 29 page petition filed in district court late today by Clifford W King assistant attorney general, following a two days' investigation of the conduct of the county attorney's office at the direction of the governor The matter has been set down for hearing December 13 before District Judge Albert C Hunt on the attorney general's application for Seaver's suspension pending determination at a final trial in the district court of whether or not the county attorney shall be relieved permanently Seaver's term of office expires Jan 1 1923 and it is not expected that the case will be finally decided before that time Because of the short time Seaver has to serve it was pointed out that a suspension would be in effect a permanent removal

The technical charge against Seaver is that he has 'wilfully failed and neglected to diligently and faithfully perform the duties enjoined upon him by the laws of the state of Oklahoma and horwilfully failed neglected and refused to faithfully enforce the prohibitory and other criminal statutes of the state'

The specific charges against him are that he has delayed and continued 24 charges of liquor violation and finally procured the wrongful dismissal of same well knowing that he had at hand ample and sufficient evidence to warrant the prosecution and conviction of the persons charged

That he has pursued delay tactics repeatedly in the prosecution of W F Hastings and others charged with interning ballots in the city primary last spring and has made repeated efforts to secure at the hands of the district judge wrongful dismissal of said cases by the payment of a small fine

That he has dismissed felony charges wrongfully against Marie Harmond, Raymond Sharp C R Hancock L F Southers Fred D Riscoll Bart Driscoll and James L Pialock after they were held for trial in the justice court following preliminary hearing on serious charges

That he has openly notoriously and publicly stated he would make no efforts as county attorney to enforce the prohibitory laws and has said in substance

"So far as I am concerned liquor can flow down the streets of Tulsa

FIVE NATIONS JOIN IN OPPOSITION TO TURKISH DEMANDS

AMERICA AND JAPAN JOIN GREAT BRITAIN, ITALY AND FRANCE.

TERRITORIAL RIGHTS FOR FOREIGNERS IS INVOLVED

Will Name Three Sub-Commissions to Report to Conference.

By Associated Press

LAUSANNE Dec 2—America and Japan both lined up with Great Britain, France and Italy today when they took their stand against Ismet Pasha's contention that Turkey had wiped out all the capitulations or extra territorial rights for foreigners, by declaring them null in October 1914

Richard Washburn Child, spokesman for the United States said that if any legal dispute arises the Washington government will be obliged to take the same position as the allied powers He expressed the belief however that the common interests of allied powers in the Turkish situation will make it possible to find satisfactory guarantees to replace the capitulations which are so distasteful to Turkey

Ismet told the delegates that Turkey's resentment against the capitulations system was beyond the comprehension of foreigners

These special rights he said were no longer necessary as the nationals of other countries were given adequate protection by the Turkish courts and other institutions and who not expect different treatment from that accorded Turkish subjects

M Barrere said there was every disposition on the part of France to seek for means by which the system could be modified to meet the Turkish objections but he emphasized the fact that the capitulations exist under treaty sanction and must be replaced by some system giving guarantees

The commission on capitulations at today's session named three subcommissions to the various aspects of the capitulations problem and report to the conference. The first will consider a scheme of judicial guarantees for foreigners as a substitute for the present system of foreign courts the second will discuss economic problems especially taxation of foreign property in Turkey and the third will consider the status of persons living in Turkey who are under the protection of foreign countries

DECLARES PROPAGANDA SPREAD IN UNITED STATES

By Associated Press

ANGORA Dec 1—Premier Rey told the national assembly today that anti-Turkish propaganda was being carried on in the United States with the evident design of embarrassing the claims of Angora government at the Lausanne conference

He reiterated that American institutions and individuals enjoyed the fullest privileges protection and hospitality of the Angora government and that they were not being asked to leave the country as alleged

"Our government has always maintained a respectful attitude toward the American nation and public opinion he continued "The American government know how zealous we have been in this regard We have always acted as guardians of the American institutions even during the world war

"It is not true that we are trying to drive out the Christians from Asia Minor—those who desire to leave have been given 20 days time"

At this juncture the speaker was interrupted by the deputy from Diarbekir who cried "We want them driven out"

CLEMENCEAU URGES UNITED STATES JOIN LEAGUE OF NATIONS

NOT ENTHUSIASTIC BUT BELIEVES IT WILL DO SOME GOOD.

MUCH APPLAUSE WHEN HE MENTIONS WILSON

Declares America Has Grown Faster Than Her Ideals—Complacent People.

By Associated Press

ST LOUIS Dec 2—Re entry of America into European affairs either as a member of the league of nations or on some other basis was urged today by Georges Clemenceau war premier of France in the fourth of his series of addresses in this country delivered at the Odeon before a capacity audience that applauded him roundly at frequent intervals

The Tiger summarizing what he thought he had accomplished so far on his tour of America declared he believed he had convinced the country that France was not militaristic nor imperialistic and that she had every intention of paying her debt to the United States

In the midst of his discussion of militarism he reiterated the statement that America showed certain signs of militarism herself and launched into a criticism of her naval policy

"I do not intend to interfere in your policy he said However you interefered in mine (referring to the militarism charges) and I think I have the right to say that sometimes you were very much inclined toward the development of your military establishment

"You have the best frontiers in the world They cannot be better But the other day you said you could not leave one unprotected unless you had 500,000 tons of warships That may be I will give you a million tons if you want it It is a way of spending and wasting your money which is of course at your disposition I do not believe very much in capital warships now, because there are submarines and aeroplanes which make warships no longer capital

"England has increased her military power 19 per cent he continued "and Japan 71 per cent. Well we will see. I doubt whether I will see the effect of this but it may be the privilege of some of you We will see what may come out of it"

Appeal to America.

Plunging then into his appeal for America to resume an active role in Europe, Clemenceau recited the history of America's entrance into the war and her part in making peace

He was interrupted by a long wave of applause when he mentioned Woodrow Wilson and his fourteen points on which he declared the peace was based

"What were these fourteen points for" he continued "Pleadings set forth before all humankind Your declaration of independence said 'equal rights, pursuit of happiness and for every man liberty' That was beautiful for them to fight for in 1776 It came from America to Europe again and you may be proud that this armistice and treaty had at its front the fourteen points which were nothing but the translation of the declaration of independence

"It seems to me some are very selfish They say we will make our home comfortable we will build walls we will not admit strangers and we will live here and be happy You did not say that in 1776

He reiterated that the Monroe doctrine had been outgrown "As I am adding we have grown faster in love me to say than your ideals You are a very complacent people

America he continued owed it to Europe to help enforce the terms of Versailles treaty because she had had so large a hand in the making of its terms, and because its terms particularly those referring to reparations and disarmament were being flouted by Germany

League of Nations

Coming finally to the league of nations he said

"I do not believe in a society of nations as a way to suppress war at least now When man has progressed more and more I hope it will be but I do not object to the best being attempted to get even the least which is sometimes worth counting

"I say if you think fit to come you come You will be well received and we will work French British and Americans together That is my program you know small beginnings may have great endings If you choose to get into the family of the society of nations that is your business but under the situation I dare say that you will be obliged to come some way or other and you had better take care that it wont be too late"

The warmth with which the Tiger's message was received was in marked contrast to the reception he got in the parade through downtown St Louis on his way to the Odeon

The crowds were large but demonstrations were sporadic This was due in part, perhaps to the fact that the Tiger was surrounded in his automobile by plainclothes men that many failed to recognize him.

Clemenceau left shortly before midnight on a special train for Baltimore He was scheduled to make a five minute speech to members of the society of Friends at Richmond Indiana in the morning He arrives in Baltimore about 9 o'clock Monday morning

MAINTAIN SECRECY IN CONNECTION WITH THE WACO TRAGEDY

FIVE WHITE MEN HELD IN JAIL PENDING AN INVESTIGATION.

PRACTICALLY ABANDON THEORY IT WAS NEGRO

Officers Refuse to Give Names of White Men Arrested in the Case.

By United Press

WACO TEXAS Dec 2—Officers investigating the Lovers Leap tragedy tonight maintained an air of secrecy almost as mysterious as the murder of young Grady Skipworth and attack upon his girl companion

Five white men arrested Wednesday night and Thursday morning were still being held three in the McLellan county jail and two in the city jail

No charges have been filed against any of them Officers refuse to say when complaints are to be lodged and decline to give any names

Turning by state rangers sheriff's deputies and city officers from the theory that it was a negro who held up the young couple as they were driving through the park, to the white man connection came suddenly in the face of earlier statements by police that they had implicit faith in the young ladys story that a negro fought with Skipworth killed him with a shot gun picked his body over the bluff to the banks of the Bosque below and then threw her over also, though she miraculously escaped

The story told by the girl after she wandered back to Waco about 2 o'clock in the morning following the night of the crime has been the only account officers have had to work on As proof that she was buried over Lovers Leap she pointed to the belt of her coat which was found caught in a tree on the steep slope This tree it is believed, was all that prevented her death

She was positive the assailant of Skipworth and herself was a negro. Five negroes were brought before her for identification, but she could not identify one of them Since then four of the colored suspects have been released That officers have not entirely abandoned the negro theory is seen in the retention of one and the fact that two investigators are still hunting for another negro, who was suspected in the recent murder of Harold Bolton killed by an assailant on the country road and his girl companion attacked The negro sought then and who is being hunted for now left this section when officers are said to have found bloody clothes in his house Another negro was caught shot to death by the girls father and burned by an irate mob

The high pitch of interest locally in the Skipworth case has been transferred to speculation as to what will develop from the detention of the five white men Some of the quintet is reported to have made efforts to get a writ of habeas corpus, which would force officers to file complaints to release them All five are waiting for the law to show its hand

Pledging support to the legislation program adopted by the "progressive bloc" in congress

By Associated Press

WASHINGTON [illegible] Plans for promotion of progressive sentiment and policies throughout the nation were made today at the concluding meetings of the two days conclave of progressives called by Senator LaFollette republican, Wisconsin and Representative Huddleston democrat Alabama under the auspices of the people's legislative service

Resolutions declaring for continuation of the new progressive movement which is to be actively translated into legislation through the bipartisan progressive bloc of congress formed yesterday were adopted during two sessions today of the public conference and addresses were made by a dozen leaders in liberal movements.

Presentation of a detailed legislative and economic program was not attempted but speakers at today's "open forum and at the closing dinner tonight proposed a multitude of reforms and flayed past and present government officials and policies A feature of the dinner tonight attended by about 500 persons was another attack upon Attorney General Daugherty by Samuel Untermyer, New York attorney

Senator LaFollette presided over the open sessions today and speeches were delivered by President Gompers of the American Federation of labor, Governor Blaine of Wisconsin, Senator Norris, republican Nebraska Senator Brookhart republican, Iowa Senators-elect Walcer, democrat Montana, and Frazier republican North Dakota and Representatives Frear republican Wisconsin and Sinclair, republican North Dakota

Resolutions adopted unanimously by the convention declared that the movement was 'non partisan' and designed primarily to promote progressive legislation Other resolutions called for extension of the direct primary including abolishment of the electoral college and direct popular election of president and vice president Another resolution called upon President Harding to release immediately all "speech" prisoners The conference declared however that it was impossible in a single day to formulate a complete legislative and economic program

Appointment by Senator LaFollette of a non partisan committee to provide for national cooperation of progressives was suggested At the same time a date for calling another conference of progressives was left open but Senator LaFollette announced that a conference of progressive governors would be held on January [illegible]

UNTERMYER SCORES ATTORNEY GENERAL AND REPUBLICANS

FORECAST COMPLETE BREAKDOWN IN ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE.

PROGRESSIVE MOVEMENT IS FIRST HOPEFUL SIGN

Says Government is in Hands of Profiteers and Other Privileged Interests.

By United Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—"A complete breakdown in the administration of justice in the United States is approaching, Samuel Untermyer, New York attorney, declared in a speech to the progressive conference here tonight, in which he sanctionally attacked Attorney General Daugherty. Untermyer also assailed the leaders of the republican party as "short sighted reactionaries," and asserted that the progressive movement as embodied into today's conference is the first hopeful sign" since the government "has been thrown into involuntary liquidation with the trusts, corporations, war and peace profiteers, and other privileged and predatory interests administering its affairs."

Untermyer's address was the principal one delivered at a dinner which closed an all day conference of progressive men and women gathered to discuss the work of the peoples legislative service, an organization formed two years ago by progressives in congress.

I have come to sound a note of warning said Untermyer, "against what I regard as the complete breakdown in the administration of justice. We are rapidly drifting towards the catacliism which was predicted when, instead of selecting a great lawyer for attorney general a man of most mediocre attainments was named, a man of the measure of the average ward politician, without learning or training as a lawyer and whose life long environment and practical work had been that of a legislative lobbist and nothing more. If, as I insist, the highest test of the efficiency of government in the administration of justice, we have today reached the lowest possible depths of humiliation to which any civilized country has sunk in recent years."

TELEGRAPH BRIEFS

Ministers Accused.

MAN WHO SOLD LIFE GIVING GLANDS IS HELD FOR VAGRANCY

SAN FRANCISCO Dec 2—George Zogaxe 23 told a remarkable story of having sold life giving glands from his body to a wealthy Seattleship builder for $5 000 when brought before police court today on a charge of vagrancy

Goat glands were substituted for those taken from him he added but said they had not proved a success He said he met the Seattle man in Phoenix Ariz., last spring and there arranged for the transfer of vital organs He said he then went to Delmar Cal where a physician performed the operation at an exclusive hotel

He was then given $5 000 and transportation to Australia as reward for his sacrifice. Zogaxe exhibited a paper purporting to be an agreement between him and the wealthy Seattle man for the performance of the operation

"OH, OH, CINDY" HAS SECOND AND FINAL PERFORMANCE

The second and final night of "Oh Oh Cindy musical comedy staged under the auspices of the high school senior class, was as successful if not more so than that of Friday evening Another full house witnessed the performance and was kept in an uproar of laughter while the song and dance hits were highly applauded

At 3 p m Saturday all the tickets for the Saturday night show were sold Although it is not known how much was taken in for the two nights, it is thought that the comedy production was a financial success.

Local Chinaman Rejoices With Countrymen Over Restoration of Shantung

Y S Howard, manager of the Majestic cafe phoned The Times Saturday night that he and all other Chinamen in the United States are elated over the fact that at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon Japan returned the province of Shantung to China He stated that not only the Chinese in the United States, but the millions of those residing in the Orient are most thankful to the United States government for lending their assistance and efforts in having this maritime province returned

According to the local cafe owner China will pay $46 000 000 to Japan for Shantung's return This amount is payable in installments extending over a period of fifty years.

This province which was virtually leased to the Germans in 1898 and which became the subject of much discussion in the peace conference was finally awarded to Japan by virtue of the five treaties and agreements she presented there This award to Japan roused the Chinese nation as nothing else has done in their history and caused hostile comment in the United States.

Japan later announced that she would return the province to China, but no date was specified in the fulfillment of the promise According to Y S Howard this promise was fulfilled at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon The German lease on the province expires in March, 1923.

DECLARES GOVERNOR IS PERSECUTED FOR POLITICAL REASONS

ADA, OKLA., Dec 2—Judge J W Bolen of the Pontotoc county district court, in which is docketed the bribery case against Governor J B A Robertson, of Oklahoma issued a statement tonight declaring that his observations convinced him that a republican county attorney out of a spirit of personal ambition and heedlessly driven along by an ardent prejudice was being industriously assisted by the Ku Klux Klan to despoil the good name and character of a democratic governor

Judge Bolen outlined his reasons for adjourning his court until next April, despite the fact that the governor's trial is set for December 12 and declared he had considerable evidence that convinced him that the Ku Klux Klan was organizing a jury to try the governor

Special Judge Thomas A Edwards of Cordell who has been assigned by Chief Justice John B Harrison of the state supreme court to hear the governor's case failed to arrive here during the day to call a special term of court as it had been thought would be necessary It developed today that Judge Edwards was assigned by Chief Justice Harrington to sit at a special term of the district court and that when the last hearing in the case was ended here last Monday Judge Edwards special term was adjourned until December 12

Mrs J H Walker has left for Fort Worth where she will visit relatives and friends for a few days

LEADER OF OLDEST BAND OF SMUGGLERS ON BORDER KILLED

SAN ANTONIO TEXAS, Dec 2—The chief of the oldest and most feared band of smugglers on the Texas Mexican border was killed and part of his band captured in a running gun battle on the Mexican side of the border near Nuevo Laredo Friday night, according to a dispatch to Consul General Enrique D Ruiz Jr San Antonio.

Martinado Villareal leader, shot several times, told Mexican guards and customs officers just before he died, that he had been operating for 18 years and had killed 14 customs guards in that period. Shortly after telling of his exploits he died.

In the band that the guards fired into were 19 smugglers. They were crossing the river with horses laden with soap when they were detected by three Mexican customs guards In the battle which followed on the banks of the river three of the smugglers were captured in addition to the leader, who was fatally shot. Six of the smugglers escaped through the brush into the hills None of the guards were wounded

Although Villareal and his band have been known to exist all these years, customs officers on either side of the border have never been able to catch them. With the death of Villareal and capture of part of his band it is believed that the operations will cease. The battle took place almost across the river from Laredo.

POLICE ARREST THREE ON WHISKEY CHARGES

FORECAST IS THAT THE IMPEACHMENT WILL BE DROPPED

Protest Keller's Plea For Month's Postponement to Prepare Case.

By LAURENCE M BENEDICT
United Press Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON Dec. 2—Recommendation by the house judiciary committee that the impeachment proceedings brought by Representative Keller, republican Minnesota, against Attorney General Daugherty be dropped for lack of substantiating evidence was forecast tonight as the republican members of the committee engaged in a dispute with Keller over the procedure to be followed

Announcement by Chairman Volstead that the committee will meet as soon as possible probably Monday to consider starting hearings was followed by a statement from Keller to the effect that he would refuse to appear and give testimony until the committee has received from the house authority to subpoena witnesses and administer oaths

Keller's declaration was regarded as making it very likely that the committee will report to the house that the impeachment resolution does not merit further consideration. The republicans on the committee who are in the majority are not satisfied with the specifications which Keller filed yesterday, and to quote Volstead, they are "more than dissatisfied with Keller's request for another month's postponement to give him more time to prepare his case

"In my opinion" declared Volstead, "the impeachment should have been dropped long ago"

PARENTS INQUIRE AFTER CHILDREN FOLLOWING STORY

MANY VISIT COUNTY OFFICIALS TO SEE IF CHILD IS INVOLVED.

CONTINUE INVESTIGATION FOLLOWING GIRL'S TALE

Threads of Hidden Information Are Slowly Unwinding Officials State.

Over a score of parents made personal calls on the county officials during the past week in face of the story published in last Sunday's Times with reference to certain existing conditions among the younger set in this city

One of the officials stated that many parents were brought to serious thought following the printing of the affair He said that it had accomplished more good than could be estimated.

Not only did parents inquire as to whether their daughter or son was involved in the affair which was brought to light through the statement of a 14 year old girl, but also made inquiry whether at any time they had been brought down to the county offices on any other matters.

Saturday afternoon a father appeared in the office of one of the officials and admitted that both he and his wife had been entirely too lax and too negligent with reference to keeping an 'eye" on their daughter. He said that he was most thankful that the matter had been brought to his attention

Officials are still working on the matter and stated Saturday that it was a slow and tedious job. The tangled threads are slowly unraveling and it was said that when finally worked out would be an expose of a most startling nature

Two girls and one boy are still being held by the officials

Shave and Bath First; Then Eat Is Legion Rule

Ex-service men who apply to the local Legion post for assistance get it, always, unless they are found to be utterly unworthy of same

But nobody pampers them. No so you could notice it.

Shaving tools are kept at the post headquarters, and the needy one is required to police his face There is a shower, with hot water at all hours, and a bath is another requirement

If there is work to do around the Legion hall, the applicant does it and is paid for it. Enough money is supplied him to provide meals until he gets on his feet again.

"Help 'em to help themselves" is the Legion's rule. With funds provided through the united welfare drive, they expect to provide for down-and-out ex-service men more systematically hereafter.

But the shave and bath must come first.

BELIEVE IT WILL BOOST THE PRICE OF FARM PRODUCTS.

ELECTION DEMONSTRATES FARMER IS DISSATISFIED

Final Disposition of Matter Is Expected to Be Made By Cabinet This Week.

By J. L. O'SULLIVAN
United Press Staff Correspondent

CHICAGO, Dec. 2—Purchase of Morris and company packing interests by J Ogden Armour now regarded as a certainty, will be followed by a steady advance in farm prices, according to a general understanding among traders and dealers in agricultural products here The consent of the administration to the deal has been gained by Armour on the stipulations that he would do all in his power to boost prices of grain and livestock during the next two years, it was learned from reliable sources here

Armour is the largest dealer in farm products in the world In addition to his enormous purchases of livestock for killing the Armour grain company is the largest concern in the world dealing in cereals The advance in wheat prices during the last few months have been generally credited to the Armour activities.

The administration is anxious to see farm products prices advance The recent election showed conclusively that the farmers are dissatisfied Economists claim there can be no healthy business revival until the farmers are on a sound basis financially.

Most farm products have been sold at less than the cost of production for the last two years Trading in grain and livestock in Chicago has been stagnant since the first word of the Armour Norris proposed deal became public Buyers and sellers are waiting the result, confident that a price advance can be expected if the sale is completed

Armour is now in New York and will go to Washington next week in the hope of getting the final word of the cabinet on his proposals

PROJECT IS NEAR HALF-WAY MARK IN CONSTRUCTION

WATER EXPECTED AVAILABLE FOR IRRIGATION BY SPRING OF 1924.

MAY REPLENISH LAKE NEXT YEAR, IF NEEDED

To Start Testing of Canal As Soon As Possible—Steady Progress Is Being Made.

The irrigation project is nearly 50 per cent complete, according to estimates by district officials and contractors Saturday, and will probably attain the half-way mark before the start of 1923 If Lake Wichita needs replenishing late in the summer of 1923, it will likely be possible to supply it from the big lake, via the diversion reservoir but it is not likely that water will be available for irrigation purposes before the spring of 1924, it was said

While the main south canal excavation is 55 per cent complete much work remains to be done on the lateral canals and on concrete structures. The storage dam is about one-third completed considering all phases of the work but the remaining two-thirds will be completed in about the same length of time as the third already finished

Water in small quantities will be turned into the main canal as early as possible, so as to test for possible weaknesses, sink holes and the like, and this process will require some months

Present operations on the project are widely varied At the storage damsite the dredge continues piling earth on the main embankment, excavation for the service and emergency spillways is nearly completed, and the final touches are being given the gate tower At the diversion damsite excavation is well advanced for the canal head gate and has started for the spillway scores of teams are at work on the main embankment On the south side canal the earth work is 95 per cent complete, and work is under way on a number of gates and culverts at various points.

TIERNAN PLAYS HIDE AND SEEK WITH OFFICERS

OBJECTS TO BEING CONFINED IN HOSPITAL FOR INSANE.

REPORTED TO BE HIDING NEAR CITY OF CHICAGO

Wife No 2 Scouts Idea He Is Crazy and Will Aid Him to Escape Asylum.

By United Press

CHICAGO, ILL. Dec 2—Prof John P Tiernan tonight played hide and seek with officers seeking to send him to the psychopathic hospital for observation as to his sanity.

The former Notre Dame law teacher accompanied by his first wife 'Gussie' was reported hiding at a village near Chicago while authorities accompanied by Blanche Brimmer Tiernan, wife No 2 scoured the city for the fugitive

The Tiernans left their South Bend home to start life anew after a paternity suit to establish the father of their third child The proceedings ended in a stalemate Blanche who was wed by Tiernan on the divorce decree obtained from his first wife which was annulled, arrived from Hansel Iowa, ready to do all in her power to help the professor escape the clutches of a hospital for insane 'He knows a lot more than some people I am acquainted with" Blanche said with meaning emphasis 'I am ready to help him and will testify to his sanity if a hearing is held"

Tiernan who fled from Chicago after Judge Righeimer issued an order that his sanity be tested sent this message from his place of seclusion through a friend to the outside world

I guess I am still one jump ahead of the officials They will find I am crazy as a fox if they fool around with me very long I know this law game. It's my business"

Tiernan said he was waiting until his lecture program was completed before coming out of his hiding place. He will talk on 'Emotion' He was bitter against his sister-in-law, Mrs Frances Pulaski who caused Judge Righeimer to issue the order for a test of his sanity "I never did get along very well with my wife's relations" he said If Blanche and the officials working with her succeed in locating Tiernan the two wives may meet.

Girls! That Derwillo Complexion is a "Stay There" Complexion

Why waste time on face powder that comes off as fast as you put it on, when you can use derwillo, the "stay there" beautifier?

Hot weather or perspiration does not effect it and when applied properly, its use cannot be detected It gives the skin that youthful babylike softness and rosy-tint every normal woman craves

Just make this test Some warm day use your regular face powder, time it by your watch and see how long it stays on Then under exactly the same conditions use derwillo and note the difference

It not only stays on until it is washed off but it looks more natural Compare it with any beautifier or powder you have ever used and you will need no argument to convince you that there is nothing else as satisfactory as derwillo

Use it when you go bathing and see how much better it stays on than any face powder, regardless of the price

Over one million girls and women among them many actresses, are now using derwillo in preference to everything else Some of the prominent actresses using derwillo are Dorothy Dalton Mitzi Louise Glaum Viola Dana, Anna Q Nilsson Louise Huff Ruth Rowland and scores of others

No other beautifier is sold under the same guarantee If derwillo does not give you instant satisfaction the store from which you bought will gladly refund your money You can get derwillo at the toilet counters of all department stores and up-to-date druggists everywhere Do not accept a substitute insist upon derwillo or nothing Tipton's Drug store, 721 Eighth street

SIR THOMAS LIPTON STILL PLANS TO GET AMERICA'S CUP

WILL NOT TRY THIS YEAR WHILE THERE STILL REMAINS SO MUCH WAR RUIN TO BE PUT IN ORDER

Hard Work the Only Thing that Really Counts in This World and that Is Sure to Do the Trick, Declares This Greatest Yachtsman Who Is Now One of the World's Greatest Businessmen, But Came to the United States a Raw Irish Lad—Americans, He Says, Are the Greatest Sportsmen in the World.

By EDWARD MARSHALL

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—His eye is clearer and his step is lighter, his laugh is keener and his cheeks are redder than when I first saw him, and that was a long time ago when we sat in neighboring seats on a reviewing stand, as Dewey, just home from Manila, was received by New York's cheering millions.

And he still means to lift that cup, just as certainly as he then meant to lift it. No other thought upon that subject has ever entered his kindly, able, determined and original mind

Of course I am referring to Sir Thomas Lipton.

I've been down this morning to the Battery, the south end of Manhattan Island, where you can look out on the bay and see the ships come in—he said, when I commented upon his ruddy color. "I always go there when I come to the United States because I like to have a wink at Castle Garden. You know I landed there on my first trip, for in those days it was where all the immigrants had to come ashore, and I was an immigrant—a raw Irish boy with nothing to my name save what was on my back and the high hopes in my heart

"I was seventeen years old and didn't know what would befall me, naturally, but knew it would be good because I meant to work for it. Something good is always to be had by those who work for it. That's the comfort that keeps men and women alive, the thing that makes the world go round. We all know that hard work will win if good brains and honesty are back of it. It's that what makes life tolerable

"The comfort the hard workers have is the knowledge that the idler, in the mass and in the long run, no matter how tremendous a fine start fate may seem to have bestowed upon him, cannot compete. There are exceptions, but they are few—just enough to prove the rule. That idleness will lose is just as certain as that hard work will win.

The Glories of Hard Work

"I never tried the idleness, myself; but I have watched those who have made wide experiments with it and it has been an interesting but not usually an inspiring spectacle. I worked hard, and in consequence, though I have crossed the ocean many times I've never come ashore in the United States at the immigration landing station but once.

"Once again I came ashore close to the same spot, but under very different circumstances. It was in 1913 and I sailed past Castle Garden, yes, and Ellis Island, the present landing station, too, and looked at them and winked as I'd a good right to. Why! Because I was then sailing on a ship named after me. The day I landed there at Castle Garden when seventeen years old I had had a lot of dreams, but that someday I would go down past the curious, round old building in a ship named after me—me, Tom Lipton!—was not among them. If anyone had hinted at such nonsense to me me I'd have told him he was crazy. But what happened. I sailed down New York Bay in that ship named after me because the skipper wanted me to. He wished it in her log that Sir Thomas Lipton, rich merchant and British knight, the vessel's godfather, had made part of the first voyage in her. He thought that I was honoring the vessel. That made me laugh to myself as we sailed past Castle Garden. You see, that first day I had not expected that, quite.

I guess I didn't quite appreciate, you see, that day when first I landed how very hard I really was going to work. Hard work can get you an [illegible] and really hard work will get you far more than you ask for. It will be sure to. Mine has.

"Still the fun is in the getting more than the having.

"I was [illegible] that day when, as [illegible] passenger I came ashore [illegible] Garden as I was the day I passed the building in the ship named after me or ever have been since. The world was wonderful. I don't suppose it's ever been wonderful to me again. And the United States—how I looked at the edges [illegible] from the ship and how my [illegible] was thrilled by the tremendous [illegible] opportunities which lay hidden [illegible]

[illegible] thought, in those [illegible] I would sail in [illegible] thing better [illegible] sired after me—[illegible] which was [illegible] watch the [illegible] though destined to be [illegible] fight with [illegible] build, would [illegible] a fair contest [illegible] greatest yachting trophy of the world—the coveted America's Cup. But even without any of that pleasant fore-knowledge I was a very happy Irish boy when I first sailed up New York Bay.

His First Glimpse of United States

"I am mentioning these things, not because to do so feeds my self-esteem but because perhaps the reading of them may give comfort to some other lad who has just landed from the steerage of a steamship in New York, or come here from a railway train from the west or north or south, or been born here for that matter, without much of any chance, apparently, to win. I hope some youngster of the sort will read whatever you may write about our talk and then swell out his chest with a deep breath, clench his fists as tight as possible and say.

"'Well, if that Irishman Tom Lipton could do that I guess I can do just as much and perhaps more.'

"I'm talking of these things, because, today, I happen to have had in mind that first glimpse of the United States and the thoughts that filled my head as I saw the land in which I had made up my mind to fight the future, winning if I could, and, if I lost, going down with a real record of hard work behind me.

"All my business, now, is on the ocean's other side, except the distribution centres which I have in the United States and almost everywhere. But in America is where I got my start.

"One of the good reasons why that business is a large one is that when I got here I was thinking hard (heaven knows I had to!) and trying to make sure I found out poor boy. Maybe I'm no better now than I was then. Maybe I was a good deal better then than I am now. That's not for me to say or even know. But certainly I've more money now than I had then and I'll say this for the Americans—they'll never treat Sir Thomas Lipton better than they did Tom Lipton, for they couldn't."

Was Brought Understanding

There was a definite note of feeling in the famous merchant-yachtsman's voice as he said these things which could not possibly be mistaken for other than the genuine article.

"And it's fine to think," he went on, presently, that the Britishers and the Americans, for more through the effort of Americans who have more energy, than through that of the Britishers, are getting to understand each other a little better than they used to.

"I don't believe it could have happened if it hadn't been for the great war. Before that came Americans when they were thinking of the Englishman remembered principally his amusing drawl, his traditional single eye-glass and spats. And Englishmen, when they thought about Americans remembered principally their twang, their interest in dollars and their chewing-gum. The idiocy of grown men and women is much stranger than the foolishness of childhood

"But now I don't believe we either of us think of these things. We can have our fun and laugh at one another with real enjoyment and without offense. We have seen each other on the field of battle and have learned to feel profound respect each for the other, both as a fighting man and as a friend. Each knows not only that the other fellow can be a most determined enemy but that he can be a very faithful and square dealing comrade. All the politicians in the world cannot break down an understanding built upon such firm foundations."

I asked Sir Thomas, one of the shrewdest as well as one of the most important business men in the whole world, about trade and finance on the other side

Everything Scarred by the War

"Of course, everything shows scars of the great war" said he. "You can't blow up the whole world without leaving ruins scattered here and there next day to be cleaned up. But trade is good in England now and I know that I, for one, have no reason to complain about the prospects. Labor troubles and the very interesting political campaign have made things very lively lately, but now these both are ended and life has settled down into a long pull toward prosperity, for everyone of every class."

Questions about the Near Eastern situation made him shake his head

"I mustn't discuss politics," he said. "I'll leave such matters to the experts. I am a business man. I know the hope of England is that all disturbances shall be quieted as soon as possible. Great Britian doesn't want an upset and distracted world, she wants trade. If for no other reason than the wish to have a chance to get back on the job Great Britian yearns for peace and sanity in all the nations of the earth

"We British businessmen who have been watching things since the explosion have learned much and some of those we have learned are good things for America to think about. Full realization of them will prevent surprise in days to come.

"Personally I am a believer in a protective tariff and I think England a free-trade nation in the days gone by has learned the wisdom of the tariff system as one lesson of the struggle. Since she has started in to understand this she has prospered. It has been that understanding which has pulled her through the hard years following the war.

"A healthy rivalry in trade between the nations will be good for everyone worth while in both of them. Nations may be perfectly good friends and still be sharp trade rivals. As a matter of fact it is trade rivalry which keeps nations up to snuff and full of energy if they're not full of energy they won't progress.

I believe honest rivalry, conducted on the principles of worth while sportsmanship, on such principles, for instances, as always have governed the great races for the America's Cup on both sides of the ocean, is the best thing possible in international business

Yachtmen Great Friends

"There are no better friends in all the world than the yachtmen of our two countries and yet we have been rivals for that cup for many, many years. You've kept it a long while. It's about time I arranged to take it from you. When I do you won't like me any the lesser for it.

"You've beaten me, time after time, but have I ever hated you for beating me? I certainly have not. Every time you've beaten me I've had more respect and liking for you. And when we really get deep into our business rivalry the feeling's going to be the same among real people of both sides. You've whipped me, but Tom Lipton is your friend with all his heart and soul."

I asked him if he meant to challenge this year.

"I think not," he answered. "The situation on the other side is still abnormal. It makes it impossible to do any racing; there has been little or none. Too many people over there have suffered to leave—even yet, much of any heart for such things, although I don't mean that we are steeped in gloom and mourning, for we're not. We're trying to be plucky and to make the best of things as they are now.

"But there are many ways in which our energy and money at the moment can be spent to better advantage than even in yacht racing. It is better, most of us believe to try to make the sorry happy and the uneasy comfortable."

Just before I had gone in to see the famous yachtsman, by the way a propos of this remark of his, I had been talking with an old acquaintance who is a member of his party now traveling in this country. He had told me of the utterly amazing number of war-orphans who are now Sir Thomas's especial charge and joy.

Determined to Lift Cup Someday

"It remains the ambition of my life to take that cup away from you" the great yachtman continued "I have now the largest collection of yachting trophies owned by any single individual in all the world and I really need that cup to make the collection complete. Indeed, I'd swap the lot of them for the America's Cup and feel that I was getting a good bargain"

At this point Sir Thomas caught himself and made a slight correction.

"But there's one cup in my possession," said he, "that's not a yachting trophy that I would not trade even for the great America's Cup, that supreme sporting trophy that good yankee sportsmanship took away from England so many years ago and that good yankee sportsmanship has kept in the United States through all the intervening years.

"The cup I wouldn't swap for the America's is a loving cup the greatest trophy of my lot—the loving cup which was given to me by the American people. Of course it means more to me than the greatest yacht-race trophy in the world

"Still I want that yachtman's cup. And I don't want it presented to me as the loving cup was given. I want to win it in fair combat or leave it where it is with those who have won and kept it in fair combat

"It's a great thing to win anything from you Americans. You're good sports, you Yanks. I have raced off the coasts of Germany and France and England for over twenty-five years and have never found better sportsmen than I've found among Americans. If any mistakes have ever been made in connection with the yacht-races in which I have competed with Americans they have been my own. No one can say anything different from that of any contest which he has with the Americans as I have known them.

Accumulation Won't Replace Yachting

"I suppose, some day we shall be fighting over cups for races in the air. It is a fascinating prospect. I have done a bit of flying and I like it, but it never will have any real effect on yachting. The sailing yacht will remain the queen of racing of that sport, in spite of aeronautical development, just as the horse remains the king of racers upon land in spite of motor-car development.

"And yacht-designing won't stand still. I'm certain that it will be improved each year. I look forward to much faster boats than we have ever known although I won't say that I know what changes in design will make them so."

"Will you say that you don't know?" I ventured to inquire.

Sir Thomas laughed. "No," he answered. "I'll not say that, either. It's as well to keep you guessing. I may know something and may not. You never can be sure about an Irishman. And like every other human thing the sailing yacht can be improved upon."

Then Sir Thomas told me a good story of an experience on shipboard where he always wears blue clothes and, on one occasion, anyway, wore a blue yachting cap

"I'm going to make Americans feel sure that I am dangerous upon the waves some day," said he, "but so far I have found it impossible to disconcert a Yankee on the water only once.

"It was the only time I ever got the better of a good American afloat. A nice old gentleman from the United States was on a ship that was crossing and on the first day out he was a little worried for fear he wouldn't be given by the steward a good place on the deck. He saw me in my blue clothes and my cap and thought I was a member of the crew. 'My man' said he approaching me, 'I wonder if you'd find me a good place and put my steamer-chair in it?'

'I will, sir,' I replied, and did it. He tipped me well and I accepted all he gave and thanked him for it.

"Well, curiously enough, quite a lot of folks on board knew me and perhaps there was a word or two about me among passengers and some mention of the fact that I owned yachts and wasn't just [illegible] in that financial state that makes a man dependent upon tips to keep the wolf away from his front door. My friend for whom I got the chair must have found out that I was not a member of the crew, for afterward whenever he caught sight of me on deck he dodged and ran. He was the only Yankee that I ever saw who ever showed the slightest fear of me afloat.

"But I don't care how brave you are when on the water. Some day I'm going to lift that cup."

Governor Suggests Five Per Cent Tax On Oil for Schools

CONCLUSIONS OF THE GOVERNOR.

First:—The state must recognize education as a vital function of the government.

Second.—Let the state make a thorough, scientific, impartial survey of our entire educational life.

Third.—Make the state the big unit of the educational system with a strong, active, aggressive state board of education as the administrative head.

Fourth.—Invest not less than $50 in every child in the state within scholastic age.

Fifth:—Provide nine months of school each year for every child in Texas.

Sixth:—Tap in Texas new sources of revenue in order to get money with which to pay our educational bill.

Seventh:—Enact a law making a safer, saner and more economic method of buying, distributing and using free text books.

Eighth:—See to it that our scholastic census is accurately and honestly taken.

Ninth:—Make scholastic apportionment on the basis of actual attendance at school.

Tenth:—Take up the slack, stop the leaks, and eliminate the waste and duplication in our educational system.

Eleventh:—Teach the boys and girls of the state some of the practical things of life, and impress on their minds the thought that the man whose brow glistens with the beads of honest sweat is king of men "for a' that and for a' that."

HOUSTON, TEXAS, Dec. 1.—Gov. Pat M. Neff spoke before the state teacher's association at Houston Friday night. His address follows:

Teachers, and friends of education:

In the preparation of this address, I selected both a text and a subject. The text is found in the Book of Books, and is couched in these few words: "People perish for lack of knowledge." My subject is found in my own earnest desire to know the truth, and is expressed in this query: "Is Texas really in the market for an adequate educational system?" It is as true now as in biblical days that people perish for lack of knowledge. The Bible at no time or place commands ignorance. It says knowledge is 'better than rubies,' 'better than gold,' 'better than choice silver,' and finally declares that 'those who have knowledge inherit substance, and have their treasuries filled.' Ignorance is dangerous, damaging, and deadening. There can be no tomorrow of greatness to any people unless the builders of today provide for the education of the youth of the land. The world is replete with statistics by which the truth of that statement can be proven with mathematical accuracy. I shall not reflect on this intelligent audience by presenting these statistics.

Early Educational Ideals.

As a native son of Texas, I am happy in the thought that our forefathers wrote into the declaration of their independence that they would not live under a government that did not make ample provision for the education of its boys and girls. They declared that "the cultivated mind was the guardian genius of democracy, and that knowledge was the only security that free man desired." Sam Houston said, "The diffusion of knowledge among the people is essential for the preservation of a free government." "The wealth of this country shall educate the children of this country," proclaimed even the fathers of the Texas republic. In the dream of our early civilization, far-visioned patriots not only made generous provision for the support of the public schools, but projected the foundation for a "university of the first class."

Function of Government.

It is clearly seen that the early pioneer of our statehood recognized public education as a vital function of the state government. With the development of modern democracy, consciousness of the obligation on the part of the state to maintain and develop education, has been steadily growing. Educational thinkers and philosophic statesmen have long since agreed that education is not only a function of the government, but its most important constitutional obligation. No government is safe whose people are uneducated. Education is an investment that builds up the state; ignorance is a tax that destroys it. Ignorance is the prolific mother of crime. Criminals come mostly from the ranks of the uneducated.

Every child in Texas, from the poorest to the richest, is entitled to a fair education. Not only is the child entitled to it, but the state must see that the child has it. The cost of this education is a proper and legitimate charge against the public treasury. It will cost the state more to let the child alone, than it will cost to educate it. This responsibility cannot be left solely to local communities. Some localities are poor in purse and some are poor in brains; to each of these, as well as to all others, the strong and far-reaching arm of the state should lend a helping hand. With the conviction that the state is primarily responsible for the education of the youth of the land, I come on this occasion to this great gathering of teachers the vanguard in the battles of peace, to think out loud with you in an earnest effort to ascertain whether or not Texas is really in the market to purchase for this state an adequate educational system.

An Adequate School System

As to what is an adequate school system, many suggestions can be easily made and theories advanced. Certainly, at this time Texas has no such system. We are graded in school efficiency, 34th from the top among the states of the union. This being true, whatever may be our merit, it is plain that we have many weak points. The first thing to do, it seems to me, would be to determine what are our elements of strength and what are our elements of weakness. To ascertain this it will be necessary to have a thorough scientific impartial survey made of our entire educational life. In advance of this information a discussion of defects must necessarily be of a general nature. Some of our defects however, are fundamental. That our system of financial support should be altered and strengthened, is clear. That we should have, to represent the state as a big unit in the administration of our educational system, a strong state board of education, comprised of men and women representing our best educational thought and highest business ability, there can be no question. With the information furnished to this board by the survey committee, the entire educational life of Texas should be studied to the one high end that the administration of education in our state may be simplified, unified, harmonized, and invigorated from top to bottom. This state board of education ought to be able to take up the slack, stop the leaks, and eliminate the waste and duplication in our entire educational system. They should be able to put on the market in this state an adequate educational system. By an adequate school system is meant a high grade school, teacher in a comfortable, well equipped school building, whether that school building be at the forks of the road or on university hill, with its doors, wherever these institutions stand swinging wide to the boys and girls of Texas, for at least nine months in the year.

The Rural Schools

In working out an adequate school system, the rural schools of the state should not be overlooked. Under the present system only a small per cent of rural children ever enter a high school. Our country schools are the colleges for the masses. We must build up our common schools; this is urgent and imperative. Our institutions of higher learning should be adequately equipped for the benefit of the fortunate few, but our rural schools should be generously supported for the democratic many. The country child should have as good school as the city youth. It has been wisely said: "If the rural schools fail, rural civilization fails; if rural civilization fails, American civilization fails."

Texas should buy the best school system there is on the market. We should have the best. The best is not too good. It is to our everlasting shame that the average boy and girl in Texas does not have an equal educational opportunity with the boys and girls of other states. If this statement is true, and no one questions it, then to every man's good right hand his sword should leap, to fight for these equal rights. In this conflict for equal rights for the children of Texas, I am ready to lead or follow the vanguard of battle. No state in the union is richer in actual or potential wealth. Our property valuation aggregates $10,600,000,000. First in territory, first in stock, first in agriculture, first in oil, first in cotton, and sixth in education. Wealth untold is here at our command. If as citizens of a state so full and so furnished, following pursuits so pleasant and so profitable, circumstanced with incentives so inspiring and so invigorating, we falter and fail in providing an adequate educational system for the boys and girls of the state, then we prove ourselves the unworthy descendents of illustrious sires. Let us balance our bounty with our boys, and lay our gold by the side of our girls, and challenge the world to produce a higher, nobler or better educated citizenship than is found where falls the light of the Lone Star.

Find New Sources of Revenue

I am not in favor, however, of buying any kind of a school system for Texas, in fact, I am not in favor of buying anything at any time from anybody, unless the money can be had with which to pay for it. If we are to have an adequate educational system in Texas, provision must be made for its support. In this connection, candor prompts me to say that I am opposed at this time under present conditions, to raising the tax rate on the homes and the lands of this state. Let us tap new sources of revenue. Wealth escaping taxation can be seen on every hand. For illustration only, I mention a few familiar commodities. Between these two extremes of big enterprises and small institutions, we have plethoric coffers of boundless wealth for tax purposes, untapped and unused. Let us first illustrate with our oil production. We are new, and have been for some years, producing approximately 10,000,000 barrels of oil a month in Texas. This oil is worth, except when the legislature is in session, about $1.50 a barrel. That will aggregate in a year $180,000,000 worth of oil. Morally, that oil belongs to Texas and she ought never to have relinquished her legal rights to it. These wells are rapidly draining Texas dry. Ought not the state at least, as a minimum, get five per cent of this stream of gold flowing out of Texas? This within itself will produce as revenue for the state, $9,000,000 a year. Now for one or two small illustrations: The people of Texas are spending annually for amusement, $30,000,000; for chewing gum, $2,000,000. This money goes mostly into the fat purses of institutions out of the state. They do business in the state, protected by the state laws, and therefore ought to help, in a substantial way, support the state. "Let us get the money where it is, and spend it on the children where they are."

Must Pay for School System

If Texas is honestly in the market for this adequate educational system, and this system is perfected and put on the market, then Texas money must pay the bill. Texas cannot have an adequate educational sytse mwithout paying for it. It will cost money—real money—the coin of the realm. It has been conservatively estimated by scholarly statisticians and educational engineers, that the state can purchase an adequate educational system by investing annually $50 in each of her scholastic students. California spends $60 per elementary child, $80 per high school child and $160 per junior college pupil. We are able to do what California does. Her resources are not as great as ours.

Suppose, however, we see if we can buy a good school system for $50 a child. Now if we make that investment, I believe the state should pay half of that and the local units the other $25. Suppose we take a look into the state treasury and see what the state is doing. Now for the year ending August 31, 1922, there came into the state treasury from all sources $28,453,149. Out of this money the state paid for higher education, that is, for institutions not classed as a part of the common school system, $5,104,785. During this same year the state paid out for the operating expenses of our public free school system, $15,643,529. If we had 1,300,000 students, the state spent last year per child to educate it, the sum of approximately $15. This was approximately $10 short per child on the part of the state from the amount necessary to buy for that child an adequate school system. In justice to the state, however, it is proper to say that of the $28,453,149 collected by the state from the people, that $24,747,714 was spent by the state for education. This left in the state treasury for all other purposes, $3,705,435. From this amount $1,151,395 was spent in the maintenance of our eleemosynary institutions, and the Confederate homes. To this sum we add $1,473,970 for the operating expenses of the courts of the state, which leaves a balance in the public treasury of $81,159 with which to meet the expenses of the entire executive and administrational departments. This amount was insufficient and the result is reflected in the present deficiencies of revenue in our state treasury. It can be clearly seen from these figures, that nearly all the money, comparatively speaking, paid into the public treasury goes for education and for support of the eleemosynary institutions of the state. The question might here be raised as to whether or not we, with our present half-baked system of education, are now getting a dollar's worth of education for every dollar's worth of money spent.

FORMER OKLAHOMA MINISTER IS GIVEN 60 DAY SENTENCE

McALESTER, OKLA., Dec. 2.—J. G. Trotter, former minister, was sentenced to 18 days' imprisonment when he pleaded guilty today in district court here to a charge of wife desertion. Trotter is to be tried on December 18 on a charge of embezzlement of funds from a charitable institution of which he was financial secretary. The Rev. C. T. Collier is to be tried on the same day for the alleged theft of a diamond ring.

Vernon Society

VERNON, Dec. 2.—Thanksgiving eve marked the beginning of what promises to be the most successful season in the Hill Crest Country club social affairs, when about 1[illegible] couples enjoyed a delightful dance at the country club hall room Wednesday evening.

"Doc" Ross' orchestra of Wichita Falls furnished music for the occasion, which was replete with beauty, rythm and life. The bewitching strains of music from the instruments added gayety and thrills to the dancers as they tripped to the rythm of the drum and followed the waltz melody of the saxophone.

The ballroom mirrored a mass of beautiful girls and attractive matrons gowned in bright colored frocks and waving ostrich fans.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Bond and Mr. and Mrs. Luther Webb were hosts and hostesses.

Following is a partial list of the guests: Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Williams, Miss Napier, Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Bailey, Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Townsend, Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Renfro, Mr. and Mrs. L. K. Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Fred L. Thompson, O. C. Morris, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. McCarter, Joe G. Summer, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Christian, Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Piper, Mr. and Mrs. J. Shirley Cook, Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Colley, S. C. Rogers, Dr. and Mrs. Armstrong, Aubrey L. Foster, John A. Storey, Mr. and Mrs. Emery Rhoads, Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Hicks, M. Keith Berry, E. B. Mauer, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Dixon, L. P. Nolan, F. C. Patton, Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Ashenhurst, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur N. Vernon, Misses Anna Joe Pendleton, Olive Shive, Mary Anderson, Vera Harrington, Maudie Lead, Dell Sumner, Bob Standifer, Doc Standifer, Oleta Youngblood, Woody Dixon, Adelene Donges and Bernice Lloyd.

Tuesday Bridge Club.

Tuesday bridge club met last Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. Daniel Bond on West Paradise street. Five tables were set for the program. Mrs. E. L. Donohey won high score with the club members, and Mrs. W. A. Wilhelm was awarded the honors as visitor. The guests other than club members were: Mrs. S. W. Bailey, Mrs. Bass King, Miss Mary Anderson, Mrs. Chas. E. Warren, Mrs. P. W. Hendrix, Mrs. Byron Roberts, and Mrs. W. A. Wilhelm. A delicious salad course was served.

Invitation Dance.

Forty-four couples attended a beautiful invitation dance at the Elks club on Thanksgiving eve. The crowd seemed to be very much in the spirit of the Thanksgiving occasion, and with the beautiful decorations which gave effect to this season of the year the dance was one that will be long remembered by local and visiting Elks.

The many friends of two prominent high school pupils were greeted with a surprise on Wednesday of this week when word reached Vernon of the marriage of Mr. James Robertson and Miss Clara Leutwyler. Mr. Robertson is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Robertson, and Mrs. Robertson is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Leutwyler, all of Vernon. Mr. Ed Robertson is engaged in the wholesale coal business and Mr. E. M. Leutwyler is engaged in the jewelry business.

THANKSGIVING LEATURED BY SPRINGLIKE WEATHER

OLNEY, Dec. 2.—Although all the business houses in Olney were closed and appropriate services were held in all the churches, and tables groaned under the burden of good things to eat, the effort of man to surround himself with the true Thanksgiving spirit was eclipsed by the effort of nature.

The balmy, springlike air, was laden with the scent of fresh turned earth, the grain fields showed a shimmer of green, and the mesquites in the pastures were still bedecked in their summer attire, while along the creeks and in the bottoms the winter grasses had spread a carpet of luscious green which made even the cattle rejoice. Nature seemed to invite every one to come out of doors, and give thanks which, by and judging by the banging of guns and the travel upon the roads, nearly every one responded.

As a fitting close to her perfect Thanksgiving service, nature pronounced the benediction with a heavy springlike rain.

UNION THANKSGIVING SERVICE HELD IN ROBY

ROBY, TEXAS, Dec. 2.—Thanksgiving day was observed here with a union service at the Methodist church, consisting of songs, readings, sermons and prayer. The business houses and offices of the town closed for the service.

In the afternoon there were basket ball games between teams of different schools of this county and Taylor county on the Roby High school court. The girls' team of the Roby High school won from the Rotan High, while the Roby boys won over Trent, but lost to the Rotan High school boys. There was some extra good playing done and the scores were very close in most of the games.

This section of the county was visited by an excellent rain last night, falling heavy it put out some stock water over the county. Other rainfall has been slow and practically all of the water went into the ground. We now have a pretty good winter season.

Roby is undergoing a wave of building prosperity. There has been something like a dozen residences and four or five business houses built here in the last six or eight months. More residences are needed.

Ten dollar cash prize will soon be offered to the person submitting the best slogan suitable for advertising this business. Watch for details this week. Faith Optical Co.—adv.

Church Notes

The members of the congregation are to be praised for coming so promptly to the morning and evening services. Any persons who are unavoidably tardy will be heartily welcomed and most courteously treated by the ushers. During the singing of special music, however, the members are requested not to seat anyone until the music is finished

Mrs. E. C. Christian will conduct the young peoples chorus this evening at 6 15 o'clock. All high school girls and boys who enjoy work in a glee club are invited to come.

Throughout Southern Methodism December is being observed as hospital month. Protestantism has postponed too long already the noble task of providing hospitals for the sick and suffering December 10 is to be set apart as hospital Sunday in this church.

The Sunday school attendance last Sunday was 346.

The workers' council of the Sunday school is to meet at the church next Tuesday, 7.30 p. m. This is to be a very important meeting. Every officer and teacher will endeavor to be present.

Superintendent E. L. Dohoney and the splendid staff of teachers of the Vernon public schools deserve the cooperation of all patrons and adults in the observation of education week. When the present enrollment of 1489 is increased by the pupils of school age not now in school then the total will leap beyond the 1500 mark.

Mesdames Ferguson and Lloyd and Messrs McKibbin and Davis will be in the vestibule of the church next Sunday to welcome all persons who attend the morning and evening services. A hearty handshake will await every person young or old, rich or poor, who may come to the house of the Lord. The doors of the church swing on hinges of welcome.

Pair of Snake's Eyes Costs Gang $12.30 Per Head

Fifteen men employed on a pipe line gang at work on the Iowa Park road knelt around a strip of paper Saturday noon each in turn deftly handling a pair of galloping dominoes. They were all shooting.

Furthermore they were all covered They didn't know at the time, however, that they were covered. But they discovered it later. Deputies Scott and Hembree, clothed in workingmen's garments, had them all faded for $12 30 apiece

"Baby needs the shoes" they cried in unison. But the lucky seven or eleven didn't show up

As each in turn marched before Justice of the Peace Maxwell Saturday afternoon and departed $12 30 shy, they knew full well that a pair of snake's eyes had turned up

VERNON DARBY TO GO ON TRIAL ON CHARGE OF MURDER

CASE SET FOR DEC. 11 IN 89TH DISTRICT COURT BY DISTRICT ATTORNEY.

CHARGED WITH MURDER OF JOHN W. WHITMAN

Case of Alleged Swindling in Connection With East Wichita Well Also Set.

Vernon Darby, charged with the murder of John Whitman, a tailor will face trial in the 89th district court Monday, December 11, according to a list of settings announced Saturday by Assistant District Attorney Sam Holliday.

Darby is accused of having been the party who fired the shot that killed John Whitman on the night of April 8, 1921, while the latter was escorting Miss Cecil Leslie to her home. According to eye witnesses the shot was fired from a speeding automobile. The car cut in front of the couple as they were walking home at the intersection of Fourth and Lee streets.

For more than a week the homicide presented a thread of mystery, but following the arrest of Vernon Darby no further investigation was had.

The case against W. P. Honaker and others, who are charged with swindling in connection with the East Wichita well, is also set down for trial on that date.

All these cases have been set down before, but due to the fact that it was impossible to reach them on account of being engaged in the trial of other cases, have not been tried. It is the plan to set these cases until the entire criminal docket in the 89th district court is disposed of.

The settings follow:

3045—B. W. Acuff, theft.
3266—Vernon Darby, murder.
3113—Grover Benson, theft.
3117—Chester Hanks, theft.
3321—Jim Gerganus, theft.
3064—W. C. Dicus, theft.
3078—G. G. Darnell, assault with prohibitive weapon.
3071—Lee Oates, assault with prohibitive weapon.
2789—W. F. Honaker et al., swindling.

The B. W. Acuff case as set down is the same one in which the Ku Klux Klan question was raised on a motion for new trial and which was reversed by the higher courts on grounds of an illegally impaneled grand jury.

MR. AND MRS. IKE MARCUS CELEBRATE ANNIVERSARY

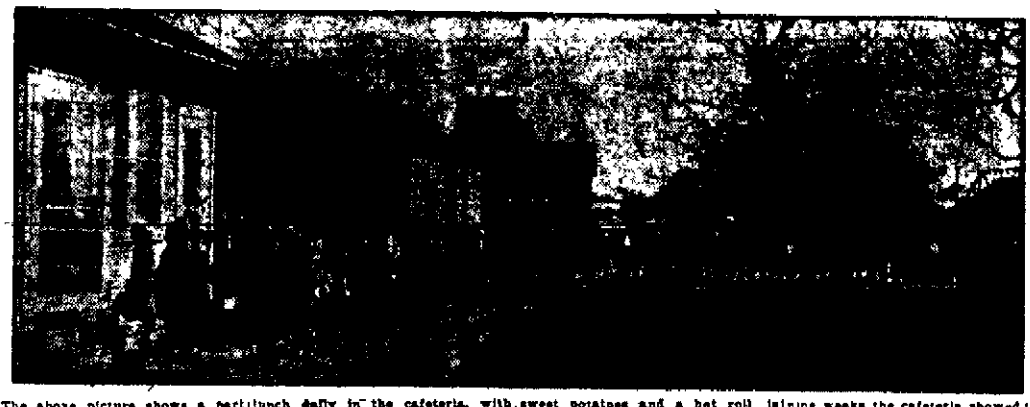
NO WONDER ALAMO CAFETERIA CLEARED $7.72 IN NINE WEEKS; LOOK AT CUSTOMERS



The above picture shows a part of the second group of children who line up for lunch every day at the Alamo school cafeteria. The first "shift" has already been served.

Three hundred children of the Alamo district have their school lunch daily in the cafeteria, with two special luncheon, a luncheon plate whose prices are probably not duplicated in any self-supporting cafeteria in the state. On one, beef roast, creamed potatoes and a hot roll are sold for five cents; on the other, another kind of meat with sweet potatoes and a hot roll is sold for the same price. No single service of any kind of food is over five cents, and the children average about 200 half-pints of milk daily.

The highest number ever fed at the cafeteria is 425, with $40 the highest day's receipts. The past nine weeks the cafeteria showed the scandalous margin of $7.72 profit! No part of the daily receipt money is used for equipment as this is all donated and the cafeteria is well equipped. A paid cook prepares the meals, and a good variety of food is provided.

SCHOOLS OF CITY AND COUNTY TO OBSERVE 'EDUCATION WEEK' WITH APPROPRIATE FEATURES

The schools of Wichita Falls and Wichita county will observe the American "Education Week," December 3-9. This is promoted by the United States bureau of education, and President Harding has issued a proclamation to that effect.

In the high school, the public speaking classes under Miss Juanita Kinsey will take charge, and each day a student from these classes and the Speaker's club will talk in each of the roll rooms. The subjects were assigned Friday, and the representatives are preparing their speeches.

The Kiwanis, Rotary and Lions clubs and every other national organization have been invited to cooperate with the educational boards. On each day of the week certain features of education will be stressed. Sunday's topic will be, "For God and Country;" on Monday, "American Citizenship;" on Tuesday, "Patriotism;" Wednesday "School and Teacher;" Thursday, "Illiteracy;" Friday, "Equality of Opportunity;" Saturday, "Physical Education."

Superintendent Burl Bryant states that the county schools will observe this week by stressing to the students the importance of punctuality in not being tardy or absent during the school year.

NAME CAPTAINS IN AMERICAN LEGION MEMBERSHIP DRIVE

Dr. J. R. Fletcher and Sam J. Beattie will lead the opposing forces in the American Legion's membership campaign which starts Monday and which will continue until December 20. It is hoped to bring the 1922 membership of the local post to the 500 mark, at least.

Each of the two captains will select nine aides, and the losing team will tender a banquet to the winners.

The post expects in 1922 to render aid systematically to ex-service men and to maintain a first class hall for the members of the Legion here. The dues for the year will be $3.50, of which $2 goes to the national headquarters and $1.50 to the local post.

AUTHOR OF DOZEN BOOKS WILL LECTURE IN CITY

Dr. William A. McKeever, author of more than a dozen books on child training, teaching, rural life and psychology salesmanship and social subjects and a contributor to a large syndicate of metropolitan newspapers, will lecture in this city under the auspices of the Practical Psychology club. The date and place will be announced later.

5 TEAMS LEFT IN STATE HI RACE—BEAUMONT IS ELIMINATED

Corpus Christi Wins In Game For South Texas Honors—Finals Delayed

BEAUMONT Dec 2 — Corpus Christi eliminated Beaumont from the state race here today 13 7 in the most spectacular game ever staged on a local field triumphing in the final quarter when Thomas Corpus Christi center intercepted a pass on his own 49 yard line and raced for a touchdown

Beaumont had tied the score early in the fourth period after a bewildering aerial attack which saw five of seven passes completed in succession

Corpus Christi s victory over Beaumont leaves five teams still in the running for state high school honors in football Corpus Christi Waco Temple Abilene and Cleburne

Waco was unable to eliminate Temple in the game played at Temple Friday the contest ending with the score tied 3 and 3 Waco had been expected to win without much trouble These teams will meet at Waco next Friday to play off the tie

This tie will delay the completion of the conference schedule Cleburne s defeat of Denison and Abilene s decisive victory over the Amarillo team earlier in the week eliminated two of the eight teams that were left after last Saturday s games It is probable that Cleburne and Abilene will be matched for an early game

WEST WINS FROM EAST IN ALL-STAR GAME AT COLUMBUS

BLOCKED KICK LEADS TO ONLY SCORE IN CONTEST FOR CHARITY

MANY NOTED PLAYERS PARTICIPATE IN FRAY

"Bo" McMillin On Winning Team, Another Centre Star With Easterners

COLUMBUS OHIO Dec 2—"Brick Muller the University of California s all American end blocked a kick scooped up the ball and ran 64 yards for a touchdown scoring a 6 to 0 victory for the west over the east in an all star football game played here today for the benefit of local charities

The two teams were made up of former college stars brought here by a local committee for the game which is an annual event and probably represented the greatest assemblage of gridiron stars ever gotten together

The western team captained by "Bo McMillin who starred at Centre included such players as Muller California Nick Michigan Wallace Iowa State Eichenlaub Notre Dame Grangle Illinois Goetz Michigan Huffman Boles Nemeck Torgeo and Trott, Ohio State Heldt and Minick Iowa Hanney Indiana and Armstrong Centre

Pitted against them and captained by Bob Peck former all-American center at Pittsburgh was a team which included Ashbaugh Brown Moseley Yale Fargo Williams Griffith, Penn State McLaren Pitts Meggett Dartmouth Vorys and Jones Yale, Fuller, Brown Witmer Princeton Thurman Virginia Thurman Pennsylvania Lea Colgate, and Roberts Centre

The Centre players after a difference of opinion as to whether the school should be classified as an eastern or western institution were split into two contingents the eastern team taking Roberts and Murphy and the west McMillin and Armstrong

SAND-LOT TITLE IS CLAIMED SATURDAY BY FILIPINO TEAM

The sand lot championship of Wichita Falls was claimed Saturday by the Filipino team socalled because its players reside in that section known as the Philippines It defeated Troop I team by a score of 24 to 0 and is now ready to meet anybody that wants to dispute its claim to sand lot honors

Quarterback Reyes s brilliant playing was a feature of the game he making two touchdowns by catching passes across the goal line Two touchdowns and a safety were scored by the Filipinos Riley Rawls scored a 3 yard place kick that was among the best features of the game The first touchdown was made by Santos who blocked a kick recovered the ball and ran towards the goal Nickels was the star of the Troop team

The winners have accepted a challenge from the Iowa Park team Anyone wanting a game may phone John Ivy coach at The Times office

NATIONAL WOMEN'S TRACK ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION FORMED

MAMARONECK N Y Dec 2—The national women s track athletic association was organized today at a meeting of representatives of schools and colleges for women from many parts of the country Its purpose will be to control all interscholastic and intercollegiate sports for girls and women

Dr Harry E. Stewart of New Haven, Conn coach of the American team which competed last August in the first women s Olympic meet at Paris, was elected president of the association

The supervision to be exercised by the new association it was pointed out will in no way conflict with that of the amateur athletic union, which at its annual meeting in New York recently voted to take direct control of women s athletics The women s organization while retaining separate identity in controlling interscholastic and intercollegiate sports will cooperate with the A. A. U. In all open competition which the latter will direct.

IOWA AND YALE MAY NOT MEET IN 1923, SCHEDULE ADOPTED

CHICAGO Dec 2—The threatened split in athletic relations between Illinois and Wisconsin failed to materialize at the annual meeting of the western conference schedule makers here today The usual Wisconsin Illinois game was set for November 10 after a lively squabble over the charges of professionalism brought before this year s game

No intersectional games were included in the schedules announced although Iowa has an open date for final arrangements of the game with Yale if desired Chicago left to open date for Princeton unless the game should be made the first of the season, which is considered unlikely

The Iowa schedule was materially strengthened with the addition of Michigan

SIX-DAY BICYCLE RACE STARTS AT MIDNIGHT SUNDAY

NEW YORK Dec 2—Promoters of the six day bicycle races at Madison Square Garden announced late today that the grind will start at midnight tomorrow night instead of 10 o clock as originally scheduled after police had served notice that any attempt to bring the race before midnight would result in arrests of all participants for violating Sabbath statutes

Members of the 18 teams entered tucked up tonight in a series of special events

The Play That Won for Harvard

George Owen Crimson halfback and star of this year s football classic is at the bottom of the pile scoring the only touchdown in the Harvard Yale game at New Haven After running 65 yards through a broken field to the Yale five yard line Owen was downed Three plunges brought the ball to the Yale one yard line. Then, Captain Buel entered the game He is shown standing on the five-yard line With Yale expecting a forward pass or drop kick, Buel crossed them and sent Owen through center for the touchdown

Junior Hi Team Closes Season With 5 Victories; Develops Much Material

For the first time since the beginning of a junior high school in this city a worthwhile football team was whipped together this year and the grid tustlers of Junior Hi proved to be a close second to their older brothers of the senior high school The Coyote pups ended the season with a record of having won five out of seven games and of having scored 82 points to their opponents 35

In each defeat the team opposite was much heavier At Electra the young Coyotes went down to a 20 6 defeat at the hands of the second team of that place but the Electra team proved to be twenty five pounds heavier to the man The only other tilt they were defeated was by the Red and Black second team

Three games were played with Burkburnett In the first contest they were held to a 6 6 tie but in the other games they smothered the Burk aggregation under with 20 0 and 70 0 victories Henrietta also failed to stop the light but fast team of Junior Hi and in two games left the field with 14 6 and 40 0 defeats

After suits were obtained at the first of the season Coach McMillin s squad could be seen practicing along side the Coyote teams Although there were hardly enough men to hold full sized scrimmage the line would divide and one side line up against the other or they battled with one of the high school teams

However the greater part of the credit should go to Coach McMillin Each day the coach was seen with his charges and through time and effort has organized a squad that would cope with many high school teams in the state As all of the members of the pups come into high school this year Coach McMillin s trouble should add greatly to the Coyote material for 1923

Buck Stead was probably the best offensive player of the squad His work in the backfield and especially his kicking was admirable while he was a sure tackler Palmer Herrod also proved efficient in the backfield and his line plunges were responsible for many gains Odel Wainscott center was the best defensive man on the team and was able to stop any end run or break up any pass or punt that the opponents might attempt The squad is as follows

Buck Stead Buster Robertson Pat Walker Palmer Herrod Carl LeLaney Odel Wainscott Jewell Sid Walter Wal Harley Hearndon Emmit Richardson Red Foute Ray Neal Jack Watt and Shorty Hicks The team averaged 135 pounds

Most of Coyotes to Be In Line-Up Again Next Year, 5 Will Graduate

In spite of the loss by graduation of two back and three line men the Coyotes will start next year with the nucleus of a team that ought to give even a better account of itself than did that of 1922

Captain Walker and Kenley from the backfield and Gates Coffey and Kiker from the line will graduate before another season To replace them not counting the long list of prospects who were in the line up for the first time this year there are some two letter men whose experience and training will give the 1923 squad a splendid start

Chewning Shaw Curtis Waggener Stringer and Moore will be the two letter men—some of them will get their third letters this year—around which to build the 1923 squad with a wealth of promising one year material and the prospect further of some mighty fine young athletes coming up from junior high A backfield that includes any three of the backs above mentioned with Deems or Mackechney available at quarter will be one to reckon with

It looks now as if the problem for 1923 will be much the same as it was for 1922—to get weight enough into the line Some additional poundage could be used back of the line too If Taylor could be persuaded to go on a diet of dried apples and sweet milk next August and September and put on more weight he ought to be a star in 1923 light as he is he is already a very consistent gainer and with additional weight without sacrificing speed could make em sit up and watch

Much depends for 1923 on whether Jim Jones is again the mentor of the squad If he returns as coach there is scarcely any limit to the team s possibilities

WHITTAKER RESIGNS AS COACH AT TEXAS; DUE TO CRITICISM

CORNHUSKERS MODEST BUT STAND ON RECORD

LINCOLN NEB Dec 2—In view of the fact that Nebraska university emerged from the Missouri valley conference football season in a tie with Drake university of Des Moines in point of percentage the university authorities here do not desire to be placed in the position of claiming a championship

The position of the authorities is merely that the university stands on its record in the games played.

SEWAGE DISPOSAL PLANT IS NEEDED; MAY COME IN 1923

CITY LIKELY TO BE REQUIRED TO BUILD ONE, IT IS BELIEVED.

RIVER ISN'T FLOWING, BAD SITUATION RESULTS

May Cause Exemption From Provisions of Pollution Law to Be Removed.

Construction of a sewage disposal plant, costing probably $200,000 may have to be undertaken in 1923 by the city council

At present the sewers discharge into the river which is bad enough it is claimed when the river is running when it isn't running as at present it is considerably worse

Wichita Falls was exempted from the provisions of the stream pollution law when that measure was passed but efforts have been made since then to have the exemption removed Farmers living down the river have tried to secure this action

A sewage disposal plant has been one of the items on the municipal program for several years, but finances haven't permitted it to be realized It is not unlikely that the city will be forced to take some action next year

SEARCHING FOR MAN WHO SHOT NEIGHBOR AT CANADIAN, OKLA.

McALESTER, OKLA, Dec 3—Posses of farmers and county authorities today were scouring the country in this vicinity in search of Nefil Dalton, who late last night shot and seriously wounded E H Needham, his neighbor in the latter's farm home near Canadian

Needham told officers that Dalton was intoxicated when he came into his house and that after he had been asked to leave, he stumbled into the children's bedroom, apparently falling asleep on the floor A few minutes later according to Needham, the screams of his 10 and 12 year old daughters called him to the room where he found Dalton making improper advances to the two girls who were in bed

When he attempted to jeet Dalton he said the latter drew a revolver

FORMER OKLAHOMA MAYOR SUES KLAN DEMANDS $30,000

FORT SCOTT, KAN, Dec 3—Theodore Schlerlman of Newata Oklahoma former mayor of Liberty Kansas, filed suit for $30,000 damages in federal court here today against the city of Liberty and the Coffeyville Ku Klux Klan organization The suit is the result of the flogging of Mr. Schlerlman by masked band recently

The petition includes Frank M Benefiel who it alleges is cyclops of klan No. 7, said to be the Coffeyville branch of the Ku Klux Klan George Sheet, who it represents to be secretary, and six other alleged members of the body whose names are unknown to the plaintiff The petition asks that the two alleged officials be compelled by the court to reveal these names

Soon after the whipping of Schlerlman then mayor of Liberty Benefiel, prominent in Coffeyville offered a reward of $1,000 through Fort Scott papers for proof that the Ku Klux Klan was responsible for the act

Schlerlman recently moved to Newata Oklahoma, thus making it possible to sue in federal court

CAPTURE THIRD MEMBER OF COUNTERFEITING GANG

NEW YORK Dec 3—With the arrest today of John Popovich of Los Angeles carrying 600 pounds of counterfeit notes of more than $4,000,000 face value United States secret service agents said they had captured the third of a gang of counterfeiters who have for what was held to be an almost impossible—printing and passing foreign bank of England notes

The other two alleged members of the band reported to be under arrest in Los Angeles are Oscar A Allison and Ivan Umadotovic

Popovich was checking out at a Broadway hotel today when secret service agents who had been registered at the same hotel since Thursday arrested him after he had paid his bill in United States currency They said he was about to leave for Canada and in his battered traveling bag they said they found 53 counterfeit bank notes of 100 pounds sterling denomination and 5 of 50

POLICE TUG BOAT UNABLE TO CATCH SHIP WITH BOOZE

NEW YORK Dec 3—Outspeeding the police tug Manhattan, which had been ordered to overtake her the Cunard liner Assyria tonight flashed past Sandhook and headed for Scotland carrying with her 11,500 cases of whiskey deported by federal prohibition agents and two deputy sheriffs alleged to have been kidnaped while executing an order to seize part of the cargo

When the Manhattan gave chase the Assyria already was well down the bay on her way to Scotland The police boat was under orders of Deputy Chief Inspector Cahilane, to whom the sheriff had appealed for aid

The deputies had gone aboard to execute a writ of replevin against the 4,000 cases seized in behalf of the Alph Drug company Prohibition officials refused to honor the writ threatened to arrest the sheriff a deputies placed two prohibition agents aboard to guard the cargo overseas, and the Assyria pulled out

The Manhattan, which has been sent out with orders to rescue the deputy sheriffs "by force if necessary" was too slow for the liner her captain reported when he returned to the battery.

The whiskey had remained in customs storage since 1921 when it was shipped by Heilbron and company distillers of Glasgow Scotland, to an agent in this country It was not seized by the prohibition officials, however, until recently it was consigned by the agent to the Alph Drug company and another firm both of which had permits to import and distribute wine

ARMENIANS IN STATE OF TERROR AS RESULT OF TURKISH CAMPAIGN

CONSTANTINOPLE Dec 3—The Armenians here are in a state bordering on terror as a result of the publicity campaign begun against them by the Turks Nothing since the Kemalists threatened to take Constantinople by force has caused more widespread despair and fearing the Armenian population than the recent publication by the official government news agency of the discovery of an alleged Armenian plot to foment a revolution and assassinate the Kemalist officials It is declared by allied observers and Armenians themselves that the Kemalists are preparing the ground for wholesale arrests and prosecutions.

They compared the present methods with those employed under the red Sultan Abdul Hamidvin in 1915 and 1916, when after the proclamation of the discovery of anti-Turkish plots tens of thousands of Armenians were imprisoned, deported or executed

Brigadier General Harrington British commander in chief the allied high commissioners and the Armenian patriarchs have protested to Rafet Pasha against the publication of these reports declaring them malicious, false and designed to arouse racial antipathies

NOTICE OF SALE
By virtue of an order of sale issued by the referee in bankruptcy, of the Wichita Falls division, I will sell at 2 p. m. Wednesday, December 6, 1922, to the highest bidder for cash, the assets of the W. H. Auto Supply Co. at 711 Tenth-st., Wichita Falls, Texas, consisting of radio accessories $337.75, fixtures $510, bicycles and automobile accessories $7,279.19, accounts and judgments $4,824.16. This sale will be subject to the orders and approval of the court. L. Shields, Trustee.

SHERIFF'S SALE
Notice is hereby given, that by virtue of a certain execution issued by the clerk of the 78th district court of Wichita county, on the 22nd day of November, 1922, in a certain cause wherein Edward Schlaffke, plaintiff, and W. H. Prince et al, defendant, in which cause a judgment was rendered on the 22th day of November, 1922, in favor of the said plaintiff, Edward Schlaffke, against said defendant, W. H. Prince, for the sum of sixteen hundred eighty-five and 18-100 dollars, with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per centum per annum from date of judgment, together with all costs of suit, I have levied upon, and will on the first Thursday in December, 1922, it being the 7th day of said month, at Wichita Falls, Texas, within legal hours, proceed to sell for cash to the highest bidder all the right, title and interest of W. H. Prince, in and to the following described personal property, levied upon as the property of W. H. Prince, to-wit: 75 shares of capital stock in and to the Call-Plater Oil company of the value of $100 per share, making a total of said 75 shares of $7500 and issued to Maria A. Prince, and afterwards endorsed by said Maria A. Prince. The above sale to be made by me to satify the above described judgment for sixteen hundred eighty-five and 18-100 dollars, in favor of Edward Schlaffke, together with the costs of said suit, and the proceeds applied to the satisfaction thereof. Fred K. Smith, sheriff Wichita county, Texas; by F. E. Johnson, deputy. Wichita Falls, Texas, Nov. 28, 1922.

TIMES DAILY MARKETS

COTTON MARKET

New York Cotton.
NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—Rallies from an opening decline met increased offerings in the cotton market late this morning and after having advanced from $4.35 to $4.11, January closed at $4.29. The general market closed steady, net unchanged to 9 points lower. The opening was steady at a decline of 3 to 11 points owing to scattered overnight selling orders and rather active selling of January, which was believed to be short covering or Japanese account. These offerings appeared to be pretty well absorbed around 24.20 for December and 24.80 for March by buying which was believed to be partly for Liverpool account.
There was a scattering local and Wall street demand which was probably promoted by reports of a good tone in the stock market, but much of which was supposed to represent covering for over the week end. There was also an impression that the opening decline had brought in some buying for domestic trade account, and the market showed a pretty steady tone during the middle of the morning with December selling up to 24.65 or within 8 points of yesterday's closing quotations, while January and later months sold 5 to 9 points net higher with March touching 24.11.
Cotton futures fluctuated very quiet, however, and the market was unsettled late in the morning by rumors of very bearish private ginning returns. These rumors were confirmed. On the contrary it was reported that the returns expected would not be issued until the beginning of next week and after rather a sharp break below the 25 cent level, prices steadier, showing rallies of several points from the lowest at the close. March sold off to 24.97 and closed at 25.00, while December closed at 24.79.

New Orleans Cotton.
NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 2.—Small declines in the early trading, a rally during the middle part of the session and pronounced softness in the late trading featured the cotton market today. It was an active session for a week end, although there were times when trading up spurts fell far short of those of the business. The close was at a net loss of 9 to 11 points with January at 24.55 cents a pound.
On the opening and for some time after offerings were liberal, coming mainly from traders on the long side who wanted to liquidate, this sort of selling being stimulated by messages to local brokers from the Fall River cloth market reporting only a small business doing. First declines carried the market off 4 to 13 points, January falling to 24.62.
Following this early liquidation the market commenced to get sold and shorts who wanted profits soon supplied more of a demand than could readily be met, with the consequence that around mid-session prices were at the highest of the day at 24.73 for January with the list 4 to 12 points higher than the close of yesterday. In the later trading there was a sharp break under the rumor that a private business was out with ginning figures to December 1 of 8,874,000 bales. Although it was quickly explained that this was an estimate of the total crop and not a count of the ginning to December 1, the market held soft to the close. At the lowest the trading positions were 18 to 18 points down net with January off to 24.54.

STOCKS AND FINANCIAL

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—Resumption of short covering and pool operations, combined with fresh buying of a few individual stocks for special reasons, brought about a further increase in prices in today's brief session of the stock market. Some profit taking was in evidence on the part of recent buyers, particularly in the coppers and rails, but most of the offerings were absorbed without difficulty. New York Central, Cerro de Pasco, Kennecott, Crucible and Associated Dry Goods being the most prominent shares unable to hold their previous gains. The declines, however, were moderate.
Some of the high priced industrial shares were bid up in rather spirited fashion on reports of possible surplus distribution. American Sugar jumping nearly nine points and Lorillard 5½, the latter, however, later cancelling about half its gain. All American cables closed 6½ points higher and gains of 3 to nearly 5 points were recorded by Elkhorn Coal preferred, Loose-Wiles Biscuit, National Cloak and Suit, Owens Bottle preferred, Studebaker and Union Tank Car.
International Harvester continued under pressure as a result of the directors' intention to discontinue the stock dividends, dropping 7½ points. Fisher Body established a new high for the year at 104½ and then dropped to 103½ for a net loss of 3½ on profit taking. Some of the recent buying of this stock has been for the account of W. C. Durant, who is seeking an interest in the company. Woolworth dropped 4½ points on a small turnover.
Only fractional gains were registered by such representative shares as Baldwin, United States Steel common, Bethlehem B, Chile Copper and Cosden. American Woolen, American Hide and Leather preferred, International Paper, Keystone Tire, North American Petroleum, Pan-American, Producers and Refiners and Standard Oils of California and New Jersey moved up 1 to 2½ points.
Except for a few substantial gains in such ordinarily inactive stocks as Louisville and Nashville, Nickel Plate, Rock Island 7 per cent preferred and Lake Erie and Western preferred, the changes in rail shares were generally unimportant.
Days total sales 465,000 shares.
Twenty industrials averaged 93.26, net gain 0.33.
High 1922 102.43; low 78.53.
Demand sterling touched 4.32. Its highest prices in three years, in response to a brisk demand here, presumably to meet payments on imports. French and Belgian currencies showed little change and other European rates were irregular.
The clearing house statement showed a deficit in reserve for the third consecutive week, the total being $7,412,190, or $1,994,160 below the week before. Loans, discounts and investments increased by $35,000 and the reserve of member banks in the federal reserve bank increased by $2,505,000. Net demand deposits were $85,424,000 more than the week before but time deposits dropped $6,404,000. Aggregate reserve totalled $593,948,000.

GRAIN AND PRODUCE

CHICAGO, Dec. 2.—Lack of speculative rather than any aggressive selling had a depressing effect on the wheat market today and all grains averaged lower after higher prices at the start. At the finish wheat was down 1 to 1c with May 1.14½ to 1.14¾ and July 1.07½ to 1.07¾. Corn was off ½ to 1c, and oats declined ¼ to ½c and provisions were 7 to 17 cents lower.
Wheat prices showed considerable strength at the opening, but weakness developed quickly. Liverpool quotations were higher despite an easier close on this side of the Atlantic yesterday and this combined with further unfavorable private cables from Argentina caused some buying at the start, which tended to lift values. Commission houses sold a little wheat at the top for account of western longs and when some traders noted the poor buying power they sold wheat and forced a break. Trade as a whole was of the usual weekend evening up character.
Trade in corn and oats was uninteresting, the markets showing a rather heavy undertone, with more or less local pressure on the deferred deliveries. Cash houses sold December corn in small lots persistently and December-May difference narrowed. Counter offerings of corn showed an increase. Shipping demand for corn was fair with sample values unchanged as compared with December.
Provisions were easier in line with hogs and grains and on 40 causing in the pit of cash lard.

TECHNICAL CLUB TO HEAR ILLUSTRATED TALK ON PROJECT

An illustrated talk by R. A. Thompson on the irrigation project will be the feature of the bi-weekly meeting of the Technical club Tuesday evening at the Wichita club, and it is expected to make the meeting a very interesting one.
Wives of members will be welcomed. President Julian Montgomery of the club announces. The meeting will start at 7 p. m.

Two Pair Silk Stockings Lead Negroes to Jail

Two pair of ladies' silk stockings served as a passport for two negroes into the county jail.
Deputy Sheriff Billy Bryan sauntered over to a negro dance Friday night. He was standing inside the dance hall enclosure enjoying himself immensely. All of a sudden he stated he heard a noise that sounded as though some one was trying to push another one through the board wall.
A door shot open and out lunged a negro. Billy promptly investigated. The ejected negro said that he had been forcibly sent out following an incident when his head and another's fist came in contact. The second negro had started down the street but at the command "Come back here," he did an about face and marched back into the arms of the law. Just before the officer started the two men on their way to the justice of the peace office, one of his two prisoners attempted to hand a woman a package. The package contained two pairs of silk stockings. Both are being held pending investigations.

Directly a well known local attorney entered the corridor and the negro's face assumed a br

MANKINS POOL IS EXTENDED QUARTER MILE TO WESTWARD

SUNSHINE STATE GETS 175 BARRELER THAT WIDENS FIELD

NO. 4 KEMP & KEMPNER COMES IN SATURDAY AT DEPTH OF 1730 FEET.

OTHER TESTS DUE FOR EARLY COMPLETION

Interest Turns to Several Wildcats —Fitzgerald Test is Drilling Below 1600.

A quarter-mile extension of the 1700-foot stratum in the Mankins pool was the most important happening of the week in the north Texas district. The Sunshine State Refining company's No. 4 Kemp and Kempner was drilled in Saturday getting the sand at 1730 feet, and is estimated at 175 to 200 barrels. The well is west of earlier production in that district and is considered an important extension.

The Rathke Drilling company's No. 1 Ferguson has picked up the same sand and has set casing to test. The Rathke's No. 1 Kemp and Kempner is estimated at 150 or better from the sand at 1688 feet.

The test of Fitzgerald and others on the Mankins, a mile northwestwof production, has apparently missed the 1600-foot pay, and is now drilling below 1600.

In the Texhoma district, that company is putting down its number 33, 34 and 35 Harper and Jones completed their No. 4 Taylor for a fair well at 1250 feet.

Lanning and Monninger have built the derrick for a test on their lease, S. T. Wilson, section 12, H. T. C. R. R. survey, abstract 1242.

Northeast of the Miller shallow pool the Iowa Park Producing company is rigging up for a star test.

SEVERAL TESTS IN YOUNG COUNTY ARE CLOSELY WATCHED

Young county failed to complete any wells during the week, which was one of the quietest for some months. A great amount of drilling is being done in all sections but nothing of importance is reported. Several locations were made, one being in the extreme northern section of the county by the Monroe Production company on the Benson tract in the northwest corner of T. E. & L. company's survey abstract 303 section 1477. The company is moving in a star. The well is located north and west of the well brought in a few weeks ago on the Stewart tract by the same company.

The Union Oil company has a derrick up on the Whittenburg land in the Ranger field for No. 2 well. The Romana Petroleum corporation is building a derrick for No. 2, on the Stanger land.

After picking up a good sand at 1750 feet showing considerable oil and gas which was passed up, the Lipan Oil company is drilling to the 1400 foot pay in their No. 3, Whittenburg. No. 5 and No. 6 of the same company are drilling around 800 feet. The Gulf Production company is building a derrick for No. 1 on the A. Perry tract three miles southeast of Graham and north of the Carter Bend district. In this same district in block 14 Fults-Albright has made a location on the McKinney-Williamson survey.

S. S. Kourl and associates have made arrangements to put down a test on the Garm survey located about seven miles southwest of Graham.

DRILLING CAMPAIGN IN MONTAGUE BEING PUSHED STEADILY

NOCONA, TEXAS, Dec. 2.—There appears to be a general campaign of drilling throughout all sections of Montague county. During the week the Potter well southwest of Bowie resumed drilling and is nearing 2,000 feet, and it is reported the well on the Sumerour land southwest of the same place has been taken over by a new company and arrangment made to give the territory a real testing out. A derrick has been built by the Title Oil company a short distance east of the town of Montague.

Acreage in the north part of the county and in the district north and east of Nocona is in greater demand than any other section. Many of the larger producing companies have bought offset tracts to the Thommason-Mallory test to be drilled on the Mrs. Jordan tract a mile east of Nocona, which will begin drilling between now and December 10. This well is a short distance south of the Robinson well which was drilled 10 years ago and had a number of good shows of both oil and gas at various depths.

Northwest about five miles from Nocona in the gas district Bass and others have started drilling on their test on Mrs. Croxton's farm and it is down to 400 feet.

Northeast of the Petroleum Producers' gas well the Humphreys' interests are ready to spud in some time next week. Drilling on the Fowler test on the S. L. Fowler tract is going ahead and has reached the depth of 3000 feet.

Some Crude In County Tests High as 41 Gravity Brings Over Two Dollars

The recent switch to a gravity basis has brought substantial raises in prices to some Wichita county producers, whose crude tests above the average on the Baume scale.

The federal receiver's production is bringing better than two dollars a barrel, testing 41 degrees and getting a premium above the posted figure of $1.60 for oil of that gravity. The last report by Receiver Delano described a method employed in the storage tanks to which the higher gravity is in part attributed, the method provides for a device whereby the oil instead of splashing into the tank from the top, flows down an incline that prevents bubbling and foaming.

A considerable share of the production in this county is testing 38 and above, and ranges from that down to 32 and 34, the low gravity occurring mostly in the shallower pools.

Where premiums of 25 to 35 cents are paid on crude which tests high enough to bring $1.60 per barrel, the price to the producer is above the two dollar mark, and quite a few are fortunate enough to obtain that figure, it is reported.

TERRITORY NORTH OF MORAN GETTING GENERAL TESTING

MORAN, TEXAS, Dec. 2.—Moran continues steady strides toward a real oil field boom. New wells are being developed every day on all sides of the town north, east south and west, but the north trend is at present demanding greatest attention.

One misses the usual stock promotion that is expected in new oil fields. If there are any stock company promoters here they are not in evidence. The 'doodle-bug' man is numerous and there are smelters' and a new one, who claims to make a fire test of rocks that is infallible. But the peddlers of pretty gold and green stock certificates is without representation as yet.

Creekology seems to be worked here with a reverse English, for drilling sites are almost invariably sought on the high ground and away from creek beds.

Drilling rigs are being unloaded in the railroad yards every day, sometimes as many as nine in one day, and new wells are spudding in all along the north trend from here to Albany.

The Roxana deep test near Sedwick, about four and a half miles north of here, is testing the sand at 5,17 feet and may put it on the pump for a time. The oil is heavier than that found in the 600 ft sand and is a black oil, while the 600 ft oil has a greenish tinge.

A new gas well on the Fite land, block 27, about one mile north of Moran, came in the early part of this week. Several new wells are reported in the Putnam field about nine miles south of here. These are producing from about 450 feet and usually make something like 25 to 30 barrels flush although there are exceptions where the flush production is very much higher. Wichita parties M. T. Yates, et al, have leased 2,400 acres in the west of the Putnam field and are preparing an extensive drilling campaign there.

Prices on leases in the north end of the Moran field, especially near the Pool well and the Roxana well have advanced from $25 and $30 to $100 and upward but there are not many sales being made at these prices; the possible buyers are evidently waiting to see what other drilling operations will develop.

A new hotel is soon to be built in Moran, and building is now under way on a new business block that will house a movie theater and two new merchantile establishments. Numerous smaller buildings are now under way. A small refinery is now building just outside the town line on the east.

At present drilling operations with a few exceptions are confined to the shallow sands' but predictions are frequently made that the 2,100 foot sands will soon come in for strong play. Wells drilled to that depth by the Texas Co. here are rated among the most profitable producing wells in the state of Texas and there seems to be considerable acreage favorable for these sands and still undeveloped. This work will require standard rigs and tools and at present there are only star rigs and spudders in the field except where the big companies are drilling deep tests for sands that may be at a depth of 3,000 or 4,000 feet.

The Empire well in section 52 about 9 miles northwest of Moran which was reported last week as making 2,000 barrels from a sand found at 3,572 feet has been deepened about eight feet and is now flowing 150 barrels an hour making 2,800 barrels daily. This well is in what is known as the Ibex field, territory that is tributary to Moran.

PANHANDLE WELL ON OWENS MAKING 3,000,000 FEET OF GAS

EASTLAND, TEXAS, Dec. 2.—The Panhandle Refining company's well on the Owens tract three miles southwest of the city is making 3,000,000 feet of gas from the 3200 foot sand. This is the No. 2 of this company on this tract and is an offset to the northwest of the Hough No. 1 of the Car-De-Zone well which came in a few months ago making 1000 barrels of oil from the same depth. Other wells drilled nearby have failed to get production found in the Hough and there is considerable interest shown by the performance of the Panhandle well.

Should it prove to be a producer when completed it will have a stimulating effect on developments in this part of the field.

NO. 1 BURNETT IN CARSON PUMPING 175 BARRELS DAILY

The Texas company's No. 1 well on the Burnett tract in Carson county in the Panhandle section was put on the pump last week and is reported making 175 barrels daily. Additional storage will be erected and the well will continue pumping for some time.

FIFTH PRODUCER IN PANHANDLE SECTION BEING COMPLETED

PANHANDLE, TEXAS, Dec. 2.—The fifth oil producing well was added to the Carson-Hutchinson county field during the past week by the announcement of the completion of the Texas Co. No. 1 Burnett, near the north line of Carson county on section 114, block 5. The well will be cleaned out and tested early in the week when announcement of the amount of oil which the well will produce is expected. Claude Winser field superviser for the Texas company, states that he believes that his well is producing from the same sand as the Gulf and Silk wells two miles to the south since the Texas encountered the sand at the same depth as the other producers which are shut in and credited with a production of 500 to 1,000 barrels daily at 3040 feet.

The gravity of oil in the three Carson county wells and two Hutchinson county producers is 38.5, with a gasoline content of 28 to 31 per cent. The large number of oil lease assignments recorded in Carson county recently, reveals the names of many large independent and major operators who have not before been interested in the field. Capitol Pool interests composed of Denver parties has spudded a deep test on section 2, block Y, and W. H. Holmes of Amarillo is constructing a derrick for immediate drilling on section 17, block Y. Both of these new locations are in south Hutchinson county and near the Holmes McIlroy and McGee producer, also a short distance north of the Carson county producers.

In the southwest corner of Hutchinson county Whittington No. 1 Sanford has a small amount of gas at 1700 feet. Near Plemons, the county seat of the county Gulf No. 1 Dial, section 30, block Z, has been completed at 3050 feet, and placed on the beam a small pump is placing oil in the tank at the rate of 175 barrels daily without lowing the fluid in the hole from the 1200 foot level.

In Carson county, Silk Bullington and Clark are spudding a second well on section 93, block 5, a few rods west of the producer of this company which is shut in awaiting storage. On section 116, block 5, Gulf, is drilling around 1400 feet on their No. 3 Burnett. North of White Deer in the east part of the county, Tipton is shut down at 2460 feet.

REFINERS HOPE FOR IMPROVED DEMAND FOR FUEL PRODUCTS

FACE LOSSES UNLESS MARKET IMPROVES, IN VIEW OF CRUDE ADVANCE.

NORTH TEXAS PLANTS FORM ORGANIZATION

High Prices Being Paid For Crude Put Refineries in Uncomfortable Situation.

North Texas independent refiners are facing a hard winter unless improved demand for fuel oil and kerosene develops, as a result of the increased price of crude, this discouraging view of the situation was voiced at the meeting of refiners of this section held Friday afternoon. Twelve refineries, most of them in Wichita county, were represented.

At existing prices losses are certain on every barrel or oil that goes through the stills it was said, and there is of course no prospect of better gasoline prices during the winter. Those present at the meeting said that there was nothing to do but face the facts and hope that the demand for kerosene and fuel oil would improve sufficiently to enable the plants to at least break even, perhaps make some slight profit.

A report on the board meeting of the Western Refiners association was given by W. B. Hamilton of the Texhoma company who attended.

Those present took steps for organization of the North Texas Independent Refiners' association, the purpose being to secure concerted action on problems confronting plants in this section. F. F. Gwynn, J. R. Auers, Eugene Constantine and E. F. Griswold were appointed as a nominating and constitutional committee, to report at a later meeting.

The situation confronting the refineries arises from the fact that their purchasing contracts call for premiums of 15 to 30 cents over the posted price; with crude in this county bringing $1.50 to $1.60 per barrel, depending on gravity, this means that around two dollars a barrel must be paid for some production, and that prices doesn't admit of a vestige of profit at existing quotations for gasoline, kerosene and fuel oil. It is necessary for the refiners to buy on a gravity basis in order to meet competition.

The price of fuel oil is fixed automatically by the price of crude being on a percentage basis.

INCREASED ACTIVITY IN CRYSTAL FALLS VICINITY DUE TO DOUGLAS WELL

BRECKENRIDGE, TEXAS, Dec. 2.—Activity in the district northeast of Crystal Falls has picked up due to the performance of the new Douglas well a few miles north. The well came in last week and is making 750 barrels from the 3200 foot sand. The well is owned by the Eliasville Pool Syndicate and is two miles from the nearest production, and will open up a big stretch of territory for future development. Several leases have changed hands at good prices and it is expected the next few weeks will find a number of tests drilling in the nearby vicinity.

SILK-BULLINGTON TESTS GAS SHOWING CAUSES FLURRY

Some excitement was caused by the showing of oil and gas in the test of Silk-Bullington and others on the Medley ranch in Gray county, and a number of people from the surrounding territory visited the well. The top of the sand was encountered at 2740 feet. When the tools were brought out of the hole the bit was found to show traces of oil with a strong smell of gas following.

DEVELOPMENTS IN SHALLOW DISTRICT AROUSING INTEREST

TERRITORY SOUTH OF IOWA PARK GETS IMPORTANT COMPLETIONS.

NUMBER OF NEW TESTS NOW BEING PLANNED

Texhoma Gets Good Well On Recently Acquired Acreage in South Electra.

Few completions appear in the record of the week's activities in Wichita county, and the most important developments were in the shallow fields, which made quite a bid for attention.

The most notable of these shallow completions was that of Owen, Blair et al on the Blagg ranch section 28 Wichita valley lands a 50-barreler in a new sand at 750 feet.

On the Barbara Parker land further south and west of Iowa Park Culbertson et al have a well estimated at 75 to 100 barrels in their No. 2.

Orth Steelsmith, et al have an excellent well 40 barrels or better in their No. 3 Roller, also south of Iowa Park.

South of Burkburnett in their No. 2 W. J. Sides, Keuhn et al have a promising sand at 1250 feet and will test it early this week.

The developments south of Iowa Park are turning added attention to that little-advertised but consistent district of the county, and a number of new tests are to be made.

At Electra, the Texhoma company completed No. 10 Waggoner, in section 27, it being the first of the wells recently acquired from O'Donnhue et al to be brought in. It is making 175 barrels from a sand at 1616 feet. The Empire's No. 63 Burnett is a 100-barreler at 1900-20, and the same company's No. 62 Burnett is making 110 barrels from the lime at 1870. Nos. 33 and 70 are awaiting for cement to set. On the Douglass, the Humble finished its No. 5 for 100 to 150 barrels in the 1900-foot pay. The Humble abandoned its No. 4 W. T. Waggoner, dry at 1095 feet.

Shallow pool activities in addition to those mentioned above include a location for a star machine test by the Texhoma on the Barbara Parker in block 5 of the McCool survey. The Minn-Tex company has a 20-barrel well in the 760-foot sand in its No. 8, and No. 4 is nearing completion.

The A. B. H. Syndicate's No. 9 H. Munger in the K. M. A. section was completed for 40 barrels in the 1600-foot sand. South of the K. M. A. field the test of Jerome B. Stone et al on the Kemp & Kempner is drilling at 590 feet.

South of Burkburnett, the Magnolia completed a 10-barrel pumper on the Reilly land.

WICHITANS ARE DRILLING WELL NORTH OF LONGVIEW

O. R. Ellis of this city, and associates are drilling a well in Gregg county nine miles north of Longview in a territory which the oil fraternity is watching with interest. Geological structures, in the vicinity are said to indicate a trend from the Mexia field to the Smackover country in Arkansas and for that reason the test is one of considerable interest.

GULF IS BUILDING FOUR-INCH LINE IN EASTLAND COUNTY

EASTLAND, TEXAS, Dec. 2.—The Gulf Pipeline company has started the construction of a four inch line from the Pleasant Grove field to the wells in the Lake district, a distance of eight miles to take care of the rapidly increasing production in this section.

Much of the present production around the lake is from lands subleased by the Gulf company which owns a large amount of acreage which it is preparing to develop.

WELLS ARE GOING DOWN IN SEVERAL DIRECTIONS

Local Parties Plan Deep Test in Sunshine Hill Country On Eede Farm.

Additional locations in the new Hirschi district have made that part of the county one of the most active. The inevitable oil field town has come into being with a row of shacks and stores but has not yet attained the dignity of a name.

Two miles northwest of the Hirschi, on E. A. Eede's land in the Mary Brush survey, Cooper and others have made location. The Sun company is building a derrick on the Hirschi land for a test half a mile west of the discovery.

Peck, Figg, Murchison and others are building the derrick for their No. 4, which will be 300 feet east of the producer southeastward, in section 33. Judge W. M. Moore has started drilling and R. M. Waggoner's well on his 160 acre lease just east of the discovery is also spudded in. The Texhoma has a derrick up for its test north of the original well.

The Sunshine Hill district is to have a deep test. Rollman Bailey and associates have contracted for a well to be drilled on the Fess farm half a mile southeast of Sunshine Hill proper. The Camp Oil and Gas company is drilling three tests on the Overall tract in the Sunshine Hill section.

The Glint of Holly Is Down the Lane, and Folks Are Hurrying to Get Through Their Ordinary Tasks Before Christmas

The glimmer of cardinal berries and glossy leaves is just around the corner, little boys on the street corners are whispering about the biggest tree y'ever see full of mistletoe, and how much they can sell the bunches for, pretty soon the Christmas bazaars are in full swing in half a dozen places about town and folks who had been slipping along taking their time about things have waked up and begun to speed

For Christmas is nigh on to us." The ordinary gatherings of every week are being hurried up and organizations are rushing along their Christmas plans, trying to get everything out of the way for the holiday times. For nobody wants to be cumbered with any kind of every day or every week or every month responsibility at Christmas time Christmas just spreads out and encompasses so much itself that the joy therein is sufficient to the time thereof!

And this next week will be pretty full of pleasant things that folks are putting behind them before Christmas. Not ordinary ones either though the week's schedule will be followed as usual by the local clubs and churches and folks generally but some especially nice things that are expected to serve as sort of appetizers for the Christmas wind!

For instance Alanda Jane Knickerbocker opens the week Monday evening with an L ening With Riley at Kemp Hotel to which she has invited every Hoosier Indianan and about two hundred other folks That is every Hoosier who is old enough not to wriggle and wail during the performances because Alanda sure do be fastened with wiggles and wails at her performances

Somehow there's something especially appropriate to us in an evening with Riley near Christmas season for Riley was the kindly lover of the beautiful holiday and kept his heart might in tune with the happiness of little folks at Yuletide So those who have their cards of admission to this unique and delightful entertainment will no doubt put them to good use The Hoosiers are invited to come regardless of cards The program for the entertainment is somewhere else on this page or the next page

And then on Tuesday Mrs J A Kemp's home is to be open to the members of the Wichita Falls Civic league at afternoon tea and the last business meeting of the league for the year Every member is invited to come and get acquainted with the other members and every active worker is expected to be there with no pink bows on the invite We are going our size

Players Club

On Thursday evening there is to be another real treat The Players club of Wichita Falls an auxiliary of the Travel club which successfully and beautifully staged several good things last year are going to present two splendid plays Barrie's Twelve Pound Look and Alice Browne Joint Owners in Spain at their Kemp Library theatre

This entertainment will be given in the evening and admission will be by membership cards with every member given the guest privilege Last year there were so many requests for the announcement of the last two plays that the Players had to make two evenings of it so they are probably anxious to have on all of their acceptances this year Mrs Ben G O'Neal is the leader of the Players

On Saturday evening the first Christmas Carnival Bazaar ever to be held in Wichita Falls will be given by the members of the Business and Professional Women's club at the Y W C A

This entertainment will be a real carnival in its type of entertainment and a bazaar in its type of gathering your loose change But full return is to be made for the loose change expended according to the printed menu in the Mr Store window and the men do say that their [illegible] are going to be near [illegible] popular prices Everything from the big cafeteria the big reception room and the big living room and the smaller but capacious club rooms are to be taken up with booths and merchandisers There will be music and [illegible] decorations and entertainments and refreshments galore all on the Christmas carnival order and we feel little Christmas spirit at the bazaar booths to be [illegible] everybody is invited too

And if that isn't enough that is of interest during the week a wide circle of folks are trying to congratulate for the W M M G [illegible] and the [illegible] for San Francisco [illegible] the Grand Opera [illegible] six months [illegible]

Community Players Will Present First Play Within Next Few Weeks; Elect New Officers Wednesday Eve

The Wichita Falls Community Players, who presented several successful plays last year under Mrs. E. L. Fulton's direction, held their first meeting of the season Wednesday night at Kemp Library and reorganized their forces for the winter's work.

During the business meeting Mrs. Nat L. Inge, one of the best known and most talented of the cast members of the organization last year, was elected vice president, Miss Ella Merle Mathis, another talented member, was re-elected secretary, and Joe Marlow was selected business manager.

The players also accepted six new members: Misses Lurline Turner, Adele Marcus, Elizabeth Moffett, Leslie Davis and Nancy Harlin and Lee Haney and Jerry Moffatt. Mrs. E. L. Fulton, who has resigned from the directorship on account of her class work in dramatic reading and dancing, was appointed chairman of the play committee and George Hodgson, chairman of the talent trial committee, it was decided that another meeting would be held the week at a date to be announced when a director to succeed Mrs. Fulton would be selected, if possible.

The players plan to present their first entertainment about the first of the year. Twenty-five members were present at the meeting Wednesday.

BIDE-A-WEE CLUB WITH MRS. CHURCH

The members of the Bide-A-Wee bridge club enjoyed a delightful Thanksgiving party when tables were arranged for sets of players.

The house was attractive in Thanksgiving decorations and roses. At the close Mrs. F. A. Rogers and Mrs. A. Kellerger won high scores and were remembered with Thanksgiving gifts. During the games the hostess served home made candy and later served fruit cake salted nuts and coffee to the following: Messrs. and Mesdames W. P. Davis, C. B. Clements, M. A. Beckman, F. A. Rogers, W. P. Cruse, L. H. Gray, Muehlberger and Dyer and Miss Carrie Church.

The club meets next time with Mr. and Mrs. Cruse at 1711 Polk.

YALE EVANGELICAL YOUNG WOMEN ORGANIZE MISSION

The young ladies of the Yale Avenue Evangelical church met Tuesday evening November the 28 and completed the organization of a Young Woman's Missionary Circle as an Auxiliary to the Woman's Missionary Society.

The following officers were elected at a previous meeting: Hazel Johnson, president; Aula Mefford, vice president; Dorothy Stanbery, secretary-treasurer, and they proceeded to the unfinished business of the society after the devotional exercises. The first thing in order was the appointing of the various committees for program, literature and membership.

The following were elected to membership in the Circle: Fern Beer, Hazel Johnson, Jeffie Beggs, Dorothy Stanbery, Georgia Wilson, Ina Wilson, Aula Mefford, Zima Lunfield, Clara Smith, Joe Clay, Alma Watson. Those who are associate members are: Bee Aldis, Curlie Cook, Martin Craig, Carl Smith, O. Moody, R. E. Cook, Roe Seals, Clearence Wagoner, Jeffery Brown, Bill Entzelon, John Entzegen, Jesser Tucker, Cecilia Watson and Mrs. J. R. Bolcher became a member with J. R. Belcher as associate member. Mrs. W. D. Cook having been previously elected to the office of leader for that department, becomes a member in active office, and W. D. Cook as pastor becomes an associate member.

There being no other business the meeting adjourned to meet again in call meeting next Monday night Dec. 4th after eleven o'clock, the first Tuesday night in each month as the regular meeting night.

Wedding of Claude Ruffner and Miss Bruce Dickson Solemnized

Mr. and Mrs. Claude Ruffner came in Saturday morning after a brief visit in North Texas and will make their home at 1104 Ninth street. Mrs. Ruffner was Miss Bruce Dickson and the Austin American contains the following account of their marriage, which was solemnized there Wednesday evening:

One of the attractive weddings of the season was solemnized Wednesday evening at the home of the bride's cousin, Mrs. A. W. Pettigrew, 2603 Rio Grande street, when Miss Bruce Dickson of Wichita Falls and Claude W. Ruffner also of Wichita Falls were united in marriage. The bride is a graduate of Texas Presbyterian College, Milford and of Southern Methodist University, and Dr. H. C. Evans, who was president of Milford College when the bride graduated, officiated at the wedding ceremony.

The house was decorated in blue and gold, colors of Zeta the bride's sorority, and these colors were followed in the costuming of the bride's party.

The bride was attended by Miss Joseph Polk, as maid of honor, and Miss Lora Alexander of Sherman was bridesmaid.

Their vows were given away by her father, Dr. J. J. Dalton. The bridal march played the wedding party and Mendelssohn's wedding march was played by Miss Alexander.

The bride wore a gray crepe dress trimmed with a veil lace with a corsage of old lace. Miss O'Reilly, maid of honor, wore a gray lace dress. Miss Alexander wore a dress of old silver tissue.

The ceremony was followed by a reception and wedding supper after which Mr. and Mrs. Ruffner left on a honeymoon trip to Fort Worth. On the honeymoon trip the bride wore a traveling dress of brown panne de velvet with hat and shoes to match. Mr. Ruffner is connected with the Fort Worth and Denver City railway with headquarters at Wichita Falls.

They will be at home in Wichita Falls.

NEW PLAY FLUSTERS BORED GOTHAMITES

of bootleggers and the present price of booze, the democratic comeback and the latest murder news. It's talk of Pirandello that you hear on every hand, as you walk up the avenue or in the subway stand. You hear it over teacups at the dance hotel (yes "Cocktail" Pirandello grand). It's really quite a wheeze.

[illegible] for half the dozen [illegible] Pirandello [illegible]

Disease or What?

Some [illegible] think [illegible] Pirandello [illegible] Valentine [illegible] Pirandello [illegible] Pirandello [illegible]

At the theater called the Princess Bro[illegible] Pirandello's show produced first in America a Pirandello show. D'you Laugh or Cry?

Some think it's a comedy and laughed both loud and long when tortured souls in torment with all everything goes wrong. The pretty lady sits enwrapped. This is the life for her! Her husband nudges her and gasps, "What's all the shooting for?"

Some feel all dizzy in the head and hang on every word while others smirk derisively and think it too absurd. Let all agree it's gripping quite though when they all come out there isn't one high brow or low knows quite what's about.

Then home they go and read up on the whyness of the wherefore, cuss and discuss it till they find some real and hidden sense.

Although there's an Irish Rose still running in the trade it seems to be entertaining. In vaudeville are a few problems that Pirandello plays. Yet Irish New York is [illegible] Pirandello [illegible] New York [illegible] Pirandello [illegible] Pirandello [illegible] Pirandello

FEDERAL GRAND JURY MAY MEET BEFORE HOLIDAYS

PRACTICALLY DETERMINED NO COURT WILL BEGIN BEFORE CHRISTMAS

ATTEMPT WILL BE MADE TO CALL GRAND JURY

Large Amount of Business Both Civil and Criminal Stands on Dockets

It is probable according to advices emanating from the district attorney's office at Fort Worth that a grand jury for the United States district court will be summoned and impaneled before the Christmas holidays.

At present it seems practically impossible that a term of federal court will be opened here before the holidays but the district attorney is making an effort to have the grand jury assemble and complete its work. If the term of court opens so late the time will be lost for this reason.

Should it be found expedient and possible to call the grand jury before the holidays it will undoubtedly be for December 18 which will give that investigating body an entire week in which to complete its labors.

Judge Wilson of the northwestern district of Texas is engaged in holding court at Fort Worth and all his efforts to secure a special judge for the Wichita Falls division availed nothing. Judge Jack had promised to come but he was seized with an attack of dengue fever.

United States Commissioner J. A. Larts in stating his views on the possibilities of the grand jury convening and also with reference to court said that there was nothing definite with reference to any of the dates.

$130,000 TOTAL OF BUILDING PERMITS DURING NOVEMBER

The total value of new buildings started in this city during the month of November is $130,000. Permits issued from the city secretary's office totalled $128,987.50; no permit is required for buildings where the expenditure is less than $100 and is out of the fire limits. There is no fee charged for such permits but there is a penalty for failure to make application before starting construction.

Forty-seven permits were issued; the majority of them represent the construction of new homes and improvements to residence property. In the month's report is included the valuation of the Mytinger and Walker building project in South land addition. The two largest permits for the month were $35,000 and $[illegible] both of these being issued on business property.

The permits issued for last week showed a sharp decline in the average for the month, there being only $10,[illegible] worth of permits. The weekly average for the month was well above $[illegible],000. Permits for the week were as follows:

[illegible] Tabelowsky $[illegible] Travis servant's house $[illegible]; W. A. Freear 162[illegible] Tenth garage $[illegible]; H. T. Thornberry 1404 Buchanan servant house $600; Thomas Wynne 1810 Fillmore five room residence, $4,000; W. T. Cathey 2209 Eighth repairs on residence $1[illegible]; O. M. R. Sansom 401 Denver repairs on residence $206; M. C. Wood 1817 McGregor garage, $125; Dewoody Battery 812 Tenth awning $30; J. Caruthers one five room residence $2,000; J. Caruthers 1407 Polk one five room residence $2,000; E. E. Keely $14; Bonner servant house $75. Total $10,05[illegible].50.

STOLEN FORD TOOL PUSHER IS RECOVERED BY POLICE

Police officers Saturday morning recovered the Ford tool pusher stolen from F. S. Reynolds Friday night. The car was located in the neighborhood of Moore - Nicholt Lumber yard and was only slightly damaged. One of the nickel fender braces had been torn from the car. No arrests were made.

WELFARE DRIVE IS FINISHED BUT MORE FUNDS TO BE ASKED

Although more than $28,000 has been subscribed in the give once drive for local welfare organizations, efforts will be made to obtain additional subscriptions to bring the total to an amount that will allow for expected shrinkage, it was announced Saturday.

The campaign was conducted at an expense of between one and two per cent for overhead, which is considered exceptional such economy frequently reaching 15 to [illegible] per cent. In his report to A. H. Britain general chairman on the campaign Hubert Harrison of the chamber of commerce, which handled the campaign details, said:

It has been my privilege to assist the municipal welfare board of our city in directing the financial campaign for $38,000 for eight organizations for the current year.

After a careful checking of all reports and cards and after a preliminary audit of the receipts I have to report in cash and pledges the total of $28,[illegible].

There are quite a number of men who might be expected to contribute substantial amounts who have not been seen and who have not sent in checks and I believe that by the continued activity of your committee of thirteen during the next few days the campaign will go well over the top. From past experience there should be a surplus of 15 per cent to take care of shrinkage in collections.

About 2,000 persons contributed in this campaign in amounts ranging from 60 cents to $500. Nearly 100 of our busiest men and women were active in the planning and solicitation.

"Expenses of the campaign have been held to a minimum. The total for advertising, printing and meals for workers is $417.25, which is a little more than one per cent on the amount raised. Our staff handled the campaign with no extra help.

It has been a pleasure to me and to those of us in the chamber of commerce office to work with you in this very worthy cause. All records are ready to turn over to the welfare board and the money has been deposited in the name of W. L. Robertson, treasurer.

AWARDS CHILDREN TO MOTHER AFTER HEARING SATURDAY

No amicable settlement having been made with reference to their domestic difficulties Judge P. A. Martin Saturday morning heard further evidence in the habeas corpus proceedings of Phillip Ryan against Annabelle Ryan.

Judge Martin denied the writ and ordered that temporarily at least the mother have control of the children. The court asked that counsel for both sides arrange for the payment of a reasonable sum by the father for the benefit of the children.

Testimony was introduced by the father in an effort to show that the mother was not competent to have the control, custody and care of the children.

Knitted Brows Indicate Eye Trouble

Knitted brows and a frowning countenance indicate eyestrain. Glasses, correctly prescribed, will smooth those wrinkles away. Our patients notice the relaxing of eye muscles when we have given them the proper correction in glasses. They not only relieve the strain upon the eyes but upon the mind and the nerves as well.

Bowie News

Seniors Entertain Juniors

On Friday night Nov 24, the Seniors entertained the Junior class, the faculty and the Senior class relatives with a party at the chamber of commerce.

The guests were received by the class officers, and the first thing to greet the eyes of those who entered were the senior colors which shaded the lights and which decorated the ceiling and wall on the other end of the room, the Junior colors were in evidence on lights and walls.

On one side of the room, under an arch of autumn leaves was stretched the Junior pennant in purple and gold and opposite, upon the other wall, was the Senior pennant in pink and green, also under an arch of leaves.

A program was rendered by the Seniors, which proved to be a burlesque on the Juniors. A concert was given upon such improvised instruments as combs and toy drums, whistles, etc. A negro quartette was introduced, which gave amusing "Take offs" on prominent Juniors, and the class president of each class made short talks. Later on a contest was held, after which punch and cake were served to over 70 guests.

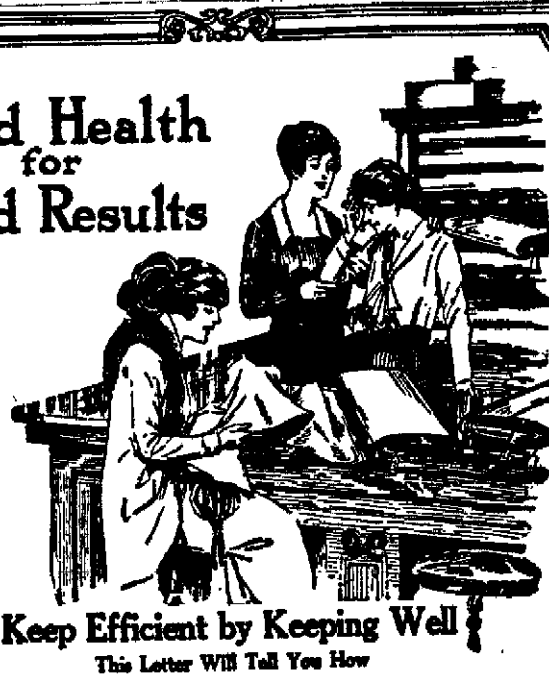
Nature is sending blood—either good or bad—to every part of your body. Feel your pulse and think about your blood!

It is a fact that with the increase of red-cells in your blood, impurities are destroyed. It is a fact that S. S. S. builds red-blood-cells and serves to destroy impurities which cause pimples, boils, eczema and rheumatic trouble! It is a fact that S. S. S. is one of the most remarkable nerve-power builders ever produced to build up fagged-out, run-down men and women. It is a fact that S. S. S. sharpens the appetite, puts the "pink of the rose" in the cheeks, gives energy, and helps to make flesh firm! It is a glorious fact that S. S. S. has given new, long-forgotten strength to older people and has made many old and young people look years younger. Blood is life,—it is your foundation. Make it rich. Get blood-strength. We all need it, especially rheumatics. Begin taking S. S. S. right away today. It will prove itself. S. S. S. is sold at all drug stores in two sizes. The larger size bottle is the more economical. If you cannot get S. S. S. yourself, see that someone in your household gets it for you. Read this aloud to the family tonight.

J. M. Mar, Los Angeles, Calif., writes: "Overwork overtoned a complaint which resulted in a tired feeling and pained in the back, that finally exhausted all my strength. I had contracted by doctors, who could do nothing beneficial, notwithstanding I turned over to them a large part of my capital. A friend advised me to take S. S. S. and after taking seven bottles I was entirely cured."

S.S.S. makes you feel like yourself again

Good Health for Good Results



Keep Efficient by Keeping Well

This Letter Will Tell You How

Cumberland, Md.—"My mother gave me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound when I was between thirteen and fourteen years old and was going to school, because I suffered with pains and could not rest. I did not have any more trouble after that until I was married, then I always was troubled in my back while carrying a child and could not do my work until I took the Vegetable Compound again. I am strong, do all my washing and ironing and work for seven children and feel fine. I always have an easy time at childbirth and what it did for me it will do for other women. I am willing to answer any woman if she wishes to write asking what it did for me."—Mrs. John Heier, 53 Dilley St., Cumberland, Md.

This letter is but one of a great number received every year from women, young and old, and from almost every walk of life. These letters testify to the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mrs. Heier has a large family, and works very hard for them. But any woman is willing to work hard and to work long hours if her health is good and she is able to get the results she is working for. As she says, what the Vegetable Compound did for her it will do for other women, and every one should appreciate her offer to answer letters asking about the Vegetable Compound.

The Vegetable Compound contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, and can be taken in safety by any woman. Your livelihood may depend on your health. So try

CHURCH HAS TOO MUCH TO DO TO GO HEARSAY-HUNTING, SAYS JUDGE KAY IN TALK TO CLASS

Where man is going rather than where he came from, is the concern of the churches Judge John H Kay told his Bible class last Sunday at the Olympic theatre In his lecture Judge Kay declared his belief that 'heresy-hunting is far less important than many other things. His lecture follows

I see the Baptist down at Waco want on a heresy hunt, and the Methodists down at Marshall are after some of their preachers and teachers about their belief about the creation These Baptists and Methodists in my humble view had better work on the problem of where man is going rather than where he came from You can't do anything about where he came from It is too late to fix that

Now I wouldn't talk about them at all but religion is a thing of love men and I never saw a man who wanted to persecute other men and other preachers and teachers about their beliefs that wasn't a tyrant in his own family

Let's consider for a minute how foolish a thing it is to build a great school great building great organization put great men in to teach and to teach things that we don't know and jump up and tell them what to teach

The Methodist church at least has got away from the idea that it can build a school house and tell the teachers whether to teach it round or flat We are past that day We may have a preacher here and there who feels that way about it but on the whole we are past that Now what is the answer to that?

The Bible isn't a book about astronomy I wouldn't go there for my astronomy It isn't about geology I wouldn't go there for that It wouldn't concern itself with the re-actions that we find in chemistry The Bible is a book about life both here and hereafter And that's the thing that we want to find out from the bible

What was our example along this line? It was the Savior went out there in this lesson teaching the glad tidings about the Kingdom of God Not urging with the Pharisees about the writings of Moses Not discussing whether he was a greater king than David But preaching a kingdom that was new that is went out to teach men that His kingdom was in the hearts of men not in history not in science but the kingdom He says is within you that is the great tidings He was giving them

He comes to this crazy man Do you know that a good many wise men think that humanity and civilization itself may at last be swept off of its feet because of a mental breakdown of the race? Ah you men that are struggling and striving for the things of this world and fighting the battles of finance know ye not that great nervous strain that enormous effort may somehow some time be reflected in a weakened nervous condition of your children and your children's children?

This man was out in the woods Before the coming of the Savior there was no place to take care of such as he—possessed of these devils. A man is in a pretty bad shape when he has got enough devils in him to kill two thousand hogs. And, the Savior stopped and helped him Helped one man, as I have often said to you One man And, this fellow was afraid A man can get so used to the devil that he is afraid to cut loose from him Afraid to turn over a new leaf and try something else

Now, I don't know anything about this miracle You don't These doctors don't It is a part of Divinity It is above us It is beyond us All religion must be super natural If we understand that, we would be equal to our Maker. We take it on faith and we do not understand it So what is the use of saying that we don't believe things that we don't understand? We would limit ourselves to a mighty yardstick if we are going to do that.

One beautiful thing about the Bible to me is that I can understand enough of it to meet my needs I can't understand all of it I don't claim to But I can understand the Savior who goes out and devotes His attention and His time and His effort to an outcast crazy man I can understand something—some little something—of His great heart He that would stop by the wayside to help a man like that

Now some of you fellows better look out In this lesson they never offered to pay these fellows for these hogs. If some of we fellows would lose a bunch of hogs like that, you would never hear the last of it. But they go on about things that are more important. A Savior who refuses to stop to see about the hogs and the loss of the hogs had already said that He didn't have any house or place to lay His head He wasn't interested in hogs and that's the reason the story is so quiet about who was compensated or how

Now have you have I got an evil spirit? Is that a danger that confronts you and confronts me? Ah Is it your only danger? Sin is a thing of the mind The law don't punish a man for killing another man in any country on earth But it punishes him for killing him with malice and aforethought In other words the sin is committed in his mind It isn't against the law simply to take your neighbor's goods But the law denounces that transaction only when you take it with intent to defraud your neighbor It is all a question of mind—the state of your mind Evil means evil spirits Or of you harbor ill will envy jealousy envy hatred If you store these things up in your mind you have got in your mind evil spirits That's what they are and right there's where the Savior proves His divinity where He proves He was the standard of all men He was clean minded There is no record of an unclean thought or an unclean act and an unclean act can only follow from an unclean thought No man ever does wrong who doesn't make up his mind to do it beforehand That's the kind of evil spirits that we have to fight against and to guard against

Now His religion—the great tidings that this lesson tells about—was a religion of love He didn't heal this man just be ause He could He healed him because of His great sympathetic heart for humanity He didn't heal him to work a miracle But He healed him in order that this man might be saved and that other men might see his salvation

His preaching is unselfish That's the trouble with a lot of our folks You know just what is implied in each criticism that you make If I say that this man is not a good man he don't believe right that is just a delicate way of saying that I am a good man and my standard is right And a man that is doing that is thinking about himself and his own standard more than that of the other fellow I wish we could be a little more gentle in our criticism I wish we could

What would you have done if you had found this fellow out there? I don't know what you would have done I think I would have been back in town as soon as I could get there telling that I saw the wildest man down there that I ever saw That's humanity That's humanity when it has been untouched by the gospel but that Savior stopped and remedied that situation

Now we can't perform these miracles, but we can do a great deal How can we do it? I think that's the biggest thing in the Bible for church people Ah these scientific stories about the creation, and these great debates and arguments are I sit in the face of the thing that I am going to say. Let thy light so shine that other men seeing your good works may glorify Me

What are we to do then? To spread his kingdom To set an example in the world To recognize that we are in a world that is here today It is a fair thing to say that whatever purpose we have got in the world, that purpose relates and must necessarily relate, to the men that are here now

Now we have got by some of the things that they had to struggle with We can take care of the insane now We can take care to a large extent of the orphans and of the aged We got all that idea from Christ But there are other problems just as important just as grave just as far reaching that confront us as confronted the apostles in their days We have got to build on their foundation

What are our problems? A better moral standard a better educational standard a better health standard a more law abiding people These are the things that we have got to work for And they are not miracles and they can only be accomplished by the painstaking effort of a group of generous minded men who believe in brotherhood and who believe in the Father of us all

IF SICK TODAY! TAKE NO CALOMEL

"Dodson's Liver Tone" Straightens You Up Better Than Salivating, Dangerous Calomel and Doesn't Upset You—Don't Lose a Day's Work—Read Guarantee

I discovered a vegetable compound that does the work of dangerous, sickening calomel and I want every reader of this paper to buy a bottle for a few cents and if it doesn't straighten you up better and quicker than salivating calomel just go back to the store and get your money back.

I guarantee that one spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone will put your sluggish liver to work and clean your thirty feet of bowels of the sour bile and constipation poison which is making you feel miserable.

I guarantee that one spoonful of this harmless liquid liver medicine will relieve the headache, biliousness, coated tongue, ague, malaria, sour stomach or any other distress caused by a torpid liver as quickly as a dose of vile, nauseating calomel, besides it will not make you sick or keep you from a day's work.

Calomel is poison—it's mercury—it attacks the bones often causing rheumatism. Calomel is dangerous. It sickens—while my Dodson's Liver Tone is safe, pleasant and harmless. Eat anything afterwards, because it can not salivate Give it to the children because it doesn't upset the stomach or shock the liver Take a spoonful tonight and wake up feeling fine and ready for a full day's work.

MOVIE CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK AT THE LOCAL THEATRES

"THE GIRL IN THE LIMOUSINE" OPENS MONDAY AT THE PALACE; FULL OF THRILLS AND COMEDY

EMPRESS ON MONDAY

DORIS MAY
In "The Understudy."

"Took the lid off the laughs" is the manner in which the New York Times wrote of "The Girl in the Limousine," the tremendous Broadway success by Wilson Collison and Avery Hopwood that is to be the special attraction of the Edna Park Players at the Palace theatre all week beginning Monday

The world loves to laugh and this play offers better and more opportunities for laughs than any farce comedy written in many moons. Its authors set out to crowd as many real roars of genuine laughter into a single evening as was consistently possible in the telling of a stage story. That they have accomplished this is "The Girl in the Limousine" is now a matter of stage history

The Edna Park Players are sparing no efforts to make their presentation of this famous laugh vehicle a signal one a production that will not be forgotten for weeks to come.

The story revolves about a series of complications that begin with the hold-up of a society man on his way to a week-end party; and the misunderstanding of a willful old aunt who persists in misunderstanding who the man is. To tell any of the story will be to spoil its delight The best way to get all that it has to offer and insure yourself against the blues is to attend one of the performances at the Palace theatre this week.

The Edna Park Players have endeared themselves to the theater going public of Wichita Falls by the conscientious way in which they strive to please. During the three weeks that they have been in the city every effort has been made to give the public the very best productions possible to obtain and to give a class of plays that would best please the patrons of the theater. That the public appreciates this effort is attested by the increasing attendance at the performances.

The management gives assurance that "The Girl in the Limousine" will be equally as entertaining, if not more so, than "Fair and Warmer" and "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath," the two popular comedies already presented.

Harry Carey in 'Man to Man' At Empress Theater

"Man to Man" is the promising title of the Universal-Jewel attraction coming to the Empress Thursday for the remainder of the week.

It is a starring vehicle for Harry Carey, filmed with elaborate attention to the thrill qualities a Western story should provide.

A cattle stampede of five thousand head ought to furnish a kick for the jaded spectator The Agoura ranch, a cattle grazing kingdom of great acreage near Universal City, California, was the scene of the stampede. The fenceless areas around Benson, Arizona, furnished a location for other thrilling scenes.

Opposite Harry Carey, Lillian Rich is given an opportunity to show whether or not British musical comedy stars make good heroines for photo-dramas She has only been in pictures two years, but her beauty and sweetness of personality have already won her the highest esteem.

Harold Goodwin, formerly a Fox star, Charles LaMoyne, Willis Robards, May Giraci and Alfred Allen handle the principle supporting parts

If the direction could be placed in better hands than Stuart Paton's it is difficulty to say whose they would be. For Patton was the director of "Conflict" the Universal-Jewel success starring Priscilla Dean, which has had quite a vogue in the leading theatres of the country.

Jackson Gregory's widely read novel, "Man to Man" says the plot to the new Carey picture

Viola Dana Film Thriller of the Secret Service

Secret service agents and opium smugglers furnish the story of Viola Dana's latest picture 'There Are No Villains" at the Gem Monday. This Bayard Veiller production for Metro proved just as thrilling as one would expect from such a subject

In the character of a federal sleuth Miss Dana becomes a stenographer in a business man's office and then following the trail of the hop smugglers acts as nurse to one of the supposed members of the gang. But the female detective falls in love with the man she is nursing and her attempts to save him from the law bring about many exciting incidents

As the female secret service agent Miss Dana gives a portrayal that is full of dramatic thrills Gaston Glass as a crippled smuggler is excellent Others in the cast are Edward Cecil DeWitt Jennings, Fred Kelsey and Jack Cosgrave. Mary O'Hara made the adaption from Frank R Adams's story John Arnold was photographer and A. F. Mantz art director to corner this particularly commodity

For several days after his successful venture it was almost impossible to obtain a complete deck of cards in the frequented stationery stores around Hollywood and the Los Angeles film colony

It all happended in this way

Ray was making a picture called "The Deuce of Spades" adapted from Charles E Van Loan's story, "The Weight of the Last Straw." One of the scenes called for a lunch counter entirely decorated with deuces of spades

To procure this odd effect about a thousand two spots were needed Ray had his managers scour Hollywood and buy up every deck of cards available They varied from plain to fancy. Cards with ordinary two spots intermingled with gilt edged pasteboards that showed the work of individual hand lettering.

The deck of cards, piled up on the floor in gaudy boxes resembled an assortment of Chinese fireworks. They stayed there just long enough for the photographers to take a few snapshots and then work started

Boys were set to work stripping the decks of the deuce of spades. Then the stage hands got busy decorating the set until it looked like Poker Flat done to a two spot.

On the following day Hollywood residents who sought to purchase a pack of cards were regretfully told that they were out of stock at the moment; but would be in again within a few days

Charles Ray has a thousand packs of cards that he would like to sell cheap. They are good cards, too The deuce of spades in each deck is perforated with bullet or tack holes, but outside of that they are guaranteed to give satisfaction.

"The Deuce of Spades' comes to the Strand for three days starting Thursday

Charles Ray in 'Deuce of Spades' At the Strand

Despite the sensational display that has been given by the newspapers to the cornering of a wheat, or cotton market, or the sewing up of a stock on the New Yor exchange, it remained for Charles Ray, motion picture star to acquire a corner on the most unusual commodity of all.

Ray cornered the card market!

Although the star failed to clear a profit of a million or more, the success of a picture he was making depended entirely upon his ability

OLYMPIC AND EMPRESS SHOWING SOME BIG SPECIAL PRODUCTIONS DURING DECEMBER AND JANUARY

Manager H. S Ford of the D P and R theatres of this city has returned from a short trip to Dallas where he booked and set the dates for a number of the biggest screen attractions of the year for his Olympic and Empress theaters

Among the most important to appear at the Olympic during December and January are, Rudolph Valentino in 'The Young Rajah,' Laurette Taylor in "Peg O' My Heart," Norma Talmadge in "The Eternal Flame," George Fitzmaurice's "To Have and To Hold," Mary Pickford's new "Tess of the Storm Country," Marion Davies in "When Knighthood Was in Flower," Harold Lloyd in "Dr Jack," "East is West" with Constance Talmadge, Norma Talmadge in "Within the Law'

Productions booked for the Empress are easily on a par with those at the Olympic. Six of them every one a big special production, were given screenings before critical audiences and pronounced the last word in screen entertainment They are W Christy Cabanne's "Till We Meet Again,' Rex Ingram's 'Trifling Women," Human Hearts" with House Peters, Thomas H Ince's "Skin Deep' with Milton Sills, 'Enemies of Woman" a Cosmopolitan production and Jackie Coogan in "Oliver Twist"

Anyone who keeps abreast the motion picture news will readily see that the above pictures are all big productions and they are to be shown here, some of them on and all very close to their release dates. Perhaps the two outstanding productions of the list are Mary Pickford's new 'Tess of the Storm Country' and 'When Knighthood Was in Flower,' a Cosmopolitan production

Of the former, nothing needs to be said except that Manager Ford wishes to lay stress on the fact that it is Miss Pickford's new version of "Tess" and not her first five reel production When Knighthood Was in Flower' is the most colossal thing that has been done since 'The Birth of a Nation' It has been eight months in preparation and is in 13 reels Marion Davies heads a notable cast It is now in its 7th week at Grauman's Rialto Los Angeles, having played to 180,000 people in that time

Automotive mechanics are being taught by motion pictures in New York's West Side Y. M. C. A

'Prisoner of Zenda' Olympic Feature Starting Monday

Motion picture fans who look for exceptional photoplays will have an opportunity on Monday to see a picture which is one of the outstanding productions of the year, for on that date Rex Ingram's "The Prisoner of Zenda" will come to the Olympic theatre for four days.

It is a story teeming with dramatic action, full of intrigue, romance and excitement. It concerns the adventures of an English gentleman, one Rudolf Rassendyll, who, because of a remarkable likeness to the ruler of the mythical kingdom of Ruritania, becomes for a time its actual ruler and wins the love of the Princess Flavia

The Prisoner of Zenda" is the most popular romance of a generation. From the time when Anthony Hope, then more interested in his political career in England than in writing, composed it, the narrative of Rudolf Rassendyll's reckless adventure has taken hold of the hearts of all who read. This was the first of the stories of romance in little kingdoms in Europe, and no better indications can be had of its success than that it inspired hundreds of writers to imitate it But none of the resulting stories had the zest, the devil-may-care spirit of the original, for that was written chiefly for the love of imagination the author had: it was as glamorous to him as to his readers

In the hands of a director such as Rex Ingram, who made "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" for the same motion picture producing organization. "The Prisoner of Zenda" has stepped out of the pages of the book and come very much to life on the screen. Different essentially from 'The Four Horsemen," as different as realism is from romance, the newer picture nevertheless has been done upon the same great scale and with the same faithfulness to the spirit of the written page. In every matter from the designing of the mammoth settings which represent the Castle of Zenda to precision of court etiquette, Mr Ingram took charge, and the result is a magnificently beautiful picture

"The Prisoner of Zenda' is a Rex Ingram production for Metro, adapted by Mary O'Hara from the Edward Rose stage version of Anthony Hope's novel It was photographed by John F Seitz.

A cast of unusual excellence has been assembled for the production Lewis Stone, Alice Terry, Robert Edeson, Stuart Holmes, Ramon Navarro, Barbara La Marr, Malcolm McGregor, Edward Connelly, Lois Lee play leading roles.

"The Marriage Chance" will be the attraction at the Strand Monday Tuesday and Wednesday. Of the picture a well known critic writes:

Hampton Del Ruth has in his [illegible] prediction turned out a [illegible] diverting picture with genuine entertainment value.

Especially some of the melodramatic [illegible] of the picture are [illegible] handled done. The scene in the operating room where the [illegible] surgeon has just been killed [illegible] the bride is accused—her rescuer defends her—the revolver in the hand of The Mute is found not to have been fired—and the door swings out moved by an unseen hand—[illegible] a high point of movie [illegible] presented.

At the close the melodramatic portion of the picture proves to be a dream but the transition from reality to the dream is so cleverly handled that it is very unlikely that the average fan will get wise until the very end of the film.

Alice Joy is seen first as a young girl just expelled from board[illegible] school [illegible] which she plays [illegible] and per[illegible]. Milton [illegible] has a great opportunity [illegible] use his ability that is [illegible]. Walter Hiers is excellent as a [illegible] sleuth. Tully Marshall [illegible] James Marcus contributes some good comedy moments. Irene [illegible] is winsome and charming as the older sister and Mitchell Lewis [illegible] hand as the role of The Mute well. [illegible] Cooley is seen in one of his colored servant characterizations.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life.—Revelation 2:10.

Men are enlisted for the labor that kills, let them be enlisted for the labor that feeds, and let the captains of the latter be held as much gentlemen as the captains of the former.—John Ruskin.

OIL INDUSTRY ALREADY HEAVILY BURDENED.

Oil as it comes from the ground is tangible, visible wealth. It is produced by a comparatively small proportion of the population and practically every barrel is gaged and accounted for. There is a popular belief that the production of oil is simply a matter of punching a hole in the ground, whereupon this hidden wealth will gush forth without effort or expense.

Oil, therefore, makes an almost ideal object of taxation. Taxes on oil are comparatively easily collected. It cannot be hidden and as compared with other industries few persons are engaged in its production. These are reasons why in nearly every state where oil is produced the industry must bear special taxes in addition to the regular and ordinary taxes borne by other industries. In Texas the industry must pay special taxes and while these taxes are expected by the producer they are onerous enough.

Take the oil industry in Wichita county for instance. It is with other property in the county assessed at a much higher rate than the average for the state and pays a considerable part of the hundreds of thousands of dollars above the proportionate share which Wichita county pays into the state treasury. The conditions which make a high tax rate and a high valuation necessary in Wichita county apply to nearly every county where oil is found, so that even without the special production tax it is heavily taxed. The production tax is just so much added.

But Governor Neff, following the ordinary course of those seeking to raise more revenue, has picked on the oil industry to furnish the additional revenue to improve public education in Texas. He has pointed out that by the simple expedient of assessing a production tax of five per cent on oil some millions of dollars could be raised annually in Texas. It sounds simple and easy enough but it will add to the heavy burdens already borne by the industry and to many operators would represent the difference between profit and loss. Oil is found only after extensive exploration at heavy cost. A large investment is necessary for its production and much effort and labor. It is doubtful whether on the whole the industry pays back the money invested in it. These facts ought to be taken into consideration when proposals are made to increase taxes on the industry.

As a class there are none who appreciate the educational needs of Texas more than the oil men. They are ready to join with the citizenship as a whole in assuming heavier tax burdens for the benefit of education in Texas, but they ought not to be asked to assume the whole of the burden themselves.

UNSOUND PRACTICES MUST GIVE WAY.

In the days when transportation costs were much lower than now the location of factories and wholesale and jobbing houses in reference to their markets was not such a matter of great importance. But transportation costs have become a much bigger item in business and there is in process a considerable realignment and relocation of factories and wholesale houses to meet this problem of transportation costs.

That is one of the reasons why business men are looking upon the agitation for the location of cotton mills in West Texas with more favor. If cotton cloth could be manufactured in West Texas where cotton is grown or at points along the route cotton takes to the gulf ports, freight might be saved both on the raw material and the finished cloth. Men are studying this thing more closely than ever and unsound economic practices must give way.

Discussing this matter the Dallas Journal quotes an interview with Paul W. Brown, of St. Louis, editor of the World at Work, in which he gives an illustration of how the present practice works in a good many lines.

"I have a brother-in-law who conducts a factory in Kansas City," said Mr. Brown. "He recently bought a supply of duck from a manufacturing establishment in Ware, Mass. In his factory at Kansas City he made shooting jackets out of this duck and then sold the lot to a jobber in Philadelphia. A few weeks later he saw some of the shooting jackets in a window in one of the Kansas City sporting goods stores. He went in and asked the proprietor of the store where he had bought the jackets and was told that he had purchased them from the jobber in Philadelphia. This means that thousands of miles were unnecessarily traversed by the raw material which went into these jackets before they were ready for the ultimate consumer."

Here we see unnecessary transportation for the raw material, the cotton cloth and the finished garment. Some day that Kansas City manufacturer will buy his cotton duck from a West Texas mill and the Kansas City dealer will buy from a Kansas City jobber and freight will be saved at least three ways.

A VICTORY FOR LAW AND ORDER AT WACO.

After a series of lynchings there good citizens of Waco have determined that there will be no more of them and this determination received a successful test a few days ago. A Waco young man had been murdered and his body thrown over a cliff and his girl companion attacked. The young woman at first declared that the assailant was a negro. A year ago such an accusation would have meant that some negro would have been arrested, would have been taken from the authorities and lynched and the mob might not have stopped with a single lynching. Perhaps a race riot might have ensued in which many might have been killed.

But after a number of lynchings in Waco, citizens there have come to the belief that in one or more such incidents an innocent negro has been the victim of the mob, and with this belief has come a determination that no life shall be made to pay the penalty except through constituted and regular authority. So following the most recent murder in Waco all the civic organizations in Waco, including the American Legion, joined in an effort to prevent disorder and lynching. The effort was successful and now it has developed pretty certainly that the murder and the attack were not committed by a negro, but that two white men were responsible. It is hardly possible that these men can escape justice.

PRAISE FOR THE TEXAS INTERSCOLASTIC LEAGUE.

For several years there has been a steadily growing interest in high school football in Texas, resulting in athletic training for an increasing number of youths and all the benefits that come from interest in athletic sports by boys, and, we can well believe, an increased interest in the youth and their schools on the part of the general public. This has been true in Wichita Falls and must be true in general for all schools in the state.

Giving credit where credit is due, we must ascribe much of this increased interest and the benefits that have followed to the Texas Interscholastic League, fostered by the University of Texas, which has arranged schedules and rules and had general supervision over the games. It would have been impossible to conduct the sectional contests and to have arranged for the intersectional games without some such agency, and that the Texas Interscholastic League has done its work well will go without contradiction.

The League fosters not only football but all other athletics suitable for school youth and also scholastic contests. It has quickened the interest of many a Texas boy and girl in things that will build body and character and develop the mind and has attracted public attention to the schools and their work. It is doing an excellent work and deserves all the support that can be given it.

In just a few more weeks this year will be last year.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

PLEASE DON'T RUN AWAY!

Stevenson once wrote: "You cannot run away from a weakness; you must sometime fight it out or perish; and if that be so, why not now, and where you stand?"

I met an old friend the other day. I had not seen him since we were boys together. I remembered his weakness of being afraid to risk things. The years had not changed him. He still bemoaned his "luck." He was still afraid—but now he is no longer with that vast wealth of youthful daring that he once had. It has passed with the years.

Please don't run away from your weaknesses. Give them battle now—and at once. Have it out who shall win and be master!

Ah, it is a divine thing to spur the little peoples of this world to be helpful—the one to the other.

And how pernicious to starve your own spirit—and then to sneak up to steal the last shred of hope that clings to someone else.

It is vastly more evil to steal hope from a man than his money. He can set about again to earn his dollar loss—but who is he that can win back lost hope?

Surely there are wretchedness, despair, ill health, and base conditions all about us all. But we can walk right through them, as a man can walk through thick, deep mud—even though he may own no boots.

God lives—to be used. There is no sounder fact than this!

Don't run away.

Stand your ground. Map out a plan—and then go to it. Fail you may. But what of it? Is not striving the very garment of success?

There is something pathetically grand about the one who strives and does not win—but there is every tint of tragedy in the eyes of him who will not try.

Say this to yourself: "Well, at any rate, I shall not run away."

Am I, for one, will bank on—you.

THE SCOUTMASTER.

There isn't any pay for you, you serve without reward.
The boys who tramp the fields with you but little could afford,
And yet your pay is richer far than men who toil for gold,
For in a dozen different ways your service shall be told.

You'll read it in the faces of a troop of growing boys,
You'll read it in the pleasure of a dozen manly joys,
And down the distant future—you will surely read it then,
Emblazoned through the service of a band of loyal men.

Five years of willing labor and of brothering a troop,
Five years of tinkling highways, with the Indian cry and whoop,
Five years of camp fires burning, not alone for pleasure's sake,
But the future generation which these boys are soon to make.

They have no gold to give you, but when age comes on to you
They'll give you back the splendid things you taught them how to do,
They'll give you rich contentment and a thrill of honest pride
And you'll see your nation prosper, and you'll all be satisfied.

Texas Viewpoints

A New State Constitution.

Amarillo Tribune: Governor Neff in opening his speaking campaign at Brenham advocated the writing of a new constitution for Texas. This is a convention which has been growing among thoughtful people in Texas for a number of years, but as far as The Tribune is able to recall Governor Neff is the first executive of the state who has thrown the influence of his office behind the suggestion. Mr. Neff also fortifies his statement that we need a new constitution in Texas by an imposing array of citations wherein the present basic law of the state is hampering our development, working injustice and bringing our laws into general disfavor. One evidence of the fact that we need a new constitution and perhaps one of the most persuasive reasons pointed out by Mr. Neff in his Brenham speech is that there have been no fewer than ninety-one amendments offered to it since it was written, most of them being put forward in recent years. Of the number thirty-eight were approved by the voters. When one takes into consideration the popular declaration to approve constitutional amendments which acts as a deterrent to the submission of amendments and prevents the adoption of many which should be approved, these figures furnish pretty conclusive evidence that Texas is really in need of a new constitution. Mr. Neff also points out that when the present constitution was framed there were only 176,000 school children in Texas and there was not a city in the state as large as Amarillo is now. More than thirteen hundred thousand children attend our public schools now and we have many cities of more than 100,000 population. Moreover, we have witnessed the discovery of oil, the development of the automobile, electrical communication and scores of things which the framers of the constitution in 1876 never dreamed of. All these things have an important bearing on legal matters and property rights and the governance of their operations. Thoughtful people did not need the arguments of Governor Neff to convince them that we need a new constitution in Texas, but his views on the subject will help to crystallize public sentiment in favor of definite action. The next legislature by all means should provide for the calling of a constitutional convention at the earliest possible date and provide sufficient funds to insure that the work will be carried forward in an orderly fashion by thoroughly competent persons. Many of our worthy legislative projects in Texas have been defeated in the past by a parsimonious appropriation. Economy is commendable in state affairs, but the sacrifice of efficiency and thoroughness is too big a price to pay for the saving of a few thousand dollars. Governor Neff is doing a splendid thing in calling the people of Texas to give thought to the important matters which will be brought before the next legislature, and it is to be hoped that he will be successful in getting his program through the legislature. It is constructive and comprehensive, which is additional reason why the people should become aroused on the subject. Our legislatures have never distinguished themselves for approving a constructive program, and it is not to be expected that the next one will prove any exception to the rule without the combined influence of the people and Governor Neff.

UTOPIA.

Better hang onto your German marks instead of using them to start the furnace or paper the attic. You might go abroad some time. And marks may be next to worthless here, but not beyond the Rhine.

John Fuhs, tenant farmer near Duquoin, Ill., sold out and moved to Germany with his family. He had $600 in real American money. Exchange is so high, he changes the $600 into enough marks to buy a completely furnished five story hotel.

DECIDING.

Tony Guitski, speeding on his motorcycle, "fails to make up his mind quick enough which of two routes to take," and crashes into a telephone pole, fracturing his skull. This happens at Whiting, Ind.

The power of quick decision is among the most important faculties of the mind. Increasingly so, as road traffic becomes more congested. But develop it only for emergencies. In normal activities, snap-judgment is often as fatal as slow decision in emergencies. The world now is undoing Europe's snap-judgment of 1914.

FINGER PRINTS.

In rare cases out of 10 the guilt of criminals is definitely established by finger prints. So claims James B. Bishop, addressing a convention of identification experts.

In the next few years, you'll hear and read a lot about the advisability of finger printing everybody in America. It is the only form of identification that cannot be forged or mistaken. And there should be no more objection to having finger prints on file with the government than giving your name to the census taker. Finger prints defend more people than they convict.

POCKETBOOK.

An efficiency expert, Royce Fisher, is converted to the Coué method of auto-suggestion. Coué claims health will improve if the patient keeps telling himself so. Fisher thinks the idea would work in business.

It would. Prosperity comes when the majority of people are thinking, "Day by day, and in every way times are getting better and better." That's what they're thinking now. When they think times are getting bad, times do get bad.

Nothing mysterious or supernatural about it. When people expect prosperity, they begin buying. That creates prosperity by giving everybody jobs. When they expect hard times, they stop buying—and the wheels of business stop.

WARNING.

World war veterans, who are entitled to vocational training but have not applied for it, must get their application in before December 16. After that, too late. The vocational rehabilitation act so specifies.

Spread the word among disabled soldiers.

FUTURE.

New York queries London by radio: "How's the weather?" London answers: "Raining, mild." The whole transaction takes place in 45 seconds.

That's astounding speed.

Yet it's snail-slow compared with human thought, which can travel to the farthest star in less than a second. Thought is a definite force, far more powerful than wireless. And we have barely scratched the surface in handling the thought force. Mental telepathy — brain radio—may not be far off.

PESTS

The deposed sultan of Turkey is plotting to regain his throne, a Constantinople newspaper warns. That's to be expected, naturally. But it starts you thinking, what a lot of trouble can be stirred up by one man.

The world now has about 1700 million inhabitants. And they'd get along together quite amicably, if it were not for a few thousand professional troubles-makers like the sultan. One of these days the people will round them up and put them under lock and key.

EXECUTIONER

A night watchman in Trenton, N. J., is soliciting jobs as an executioner at a cut-rate price. His wife, interviewed about his ambition, says he is offering to send the death current through the electric chair and its occupant, as low as $175 a job.

"If I don't do it, somebody else will."

There are some jobs that, if handled properly, cannot pay too much money. A million a year would be cheap for a man willing to be experimented on for the benefit of medical science.

And there are other jobs that should pay so little that no one would take them. An executioner, for instance. Still, it might be impossible. Plenty of men will kill for $5 a head.

GUT

Bonar Law, conceivably, may be head of the British empire for five years, possibly 10. Or he may be out in another week.

That's because they have this system: When the party in power gets deadlocked with its opposition, it has to call for a vote of confidence. And if it loses on the vote, a general election automatically follows—to let the people decide.

In our country a president, once in office, remains for four years even if he and his party become so deadlocked with the party out of power that the wheels of government nearly all stop.

Still, if we adopted the British system—which Canada also has—we might have general elections every few weeks.

CAUGHT

Mitchell Hedges, explorer, says a light fishing line in the Bay of Panama. A sawfish weighing 4800 pounds swallows the bait. It's his last. Hedges lands the fish, 20 feet long.

It's a remarkable instance of the power of skill.

As in other activities of life, Hedges' skill was acquired slowly—years. Your petty troubles are sent when he started fishing, he probably was unable to land a six-pound—the big ones.

Now one man in a thousand may do better work when you make him mad; and one in a hundred may be scared by ragging and improve his output to hold his job; but the average man is trying hard to deliver the goods, and he will try the harder for a little commendation.

SULLIVAN DISCUSSES PROBABLE REPUBLICAN LEADER IN 1924

NOT NOW FOREGONE CONCLUSION PRESIDENT SERVING FIRST TERM IS ASSURED OF A RENOMINATION

By MARK SULLIVAN

National Political Correspondent of the New York Evening Post and Wichita Daily Times

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 2—All consideration of the republican presidential nomination for 1924 begins with President Harding. A good many say that it ends with him also. That, however, does not necessarily follow. The most experienced politicians will tell you that the rule which calls for a party in power to nominate the president in office for a second term cannot be broken. In point of fact, however, this rule has been broken in the past and will be broken in the future more than it has in the past.

The politicians who say and believe that for good or for ill the republican party must nominate its president in 1924 are thinking in terms of the days before the direct primary. It was about 1912 when the direct primary began to be adopted generally. There was a time when presidential nominations were almost wholly within the will of the party leaders, as the politicians say that the party was practically universal to renominate a president. To do otherwise was regarded almost as a slap in the president. It was regarded as equivalent of saying that the president has not been a success.

But we must refer to that only to show to what extent the tradition has been affected by the present situation. There was a time when the party leaders could decide to drop a president in office and get another from the party. It was the case of Polk in 1848. In the case of the present situation, it must be remembered that there was practically no opposition to Wilson within the Democratic party in that year. Wilson had been given the nomination on a platform which had been made by the party leaders, and had not been affected by the presidential primaries which had then come into existence. But Wilson was given the rank and file of the party when, through the medium of the presidential primaries, they made it known that they wanted him.

Sooner or later we shall have an example which will show us what the presidential primaries have done to this old tradition of the parties. We shall see a president and we shall see how the party leaders want to give it to him, but where considerable sections of the rank and file of the party are opposed to him—and have the opportunity to express their opposition effectively through the presidential primaries.

The point of all this is that the presidential primaries, which are now practically universal in all the states, are different and much weaker standing to the rule that a president in office must be given a nomination for a second term (assuming of course that he wants it). It is easy to picture a situation in which a president in office wants a renomination in which the party leaders generally think it is a good policy to give him a renomination, but in which the rank and file of the party, when they have the opportunity, express a different opinion.

May Not Want Renomination

Whether Harding, when 1924 comes, will want a renomination is a subject of a great deal of discussion. His friends say it is not necessarily at fected by the recent election. Before the last election there was the same amount of guessing as to whether the republicans would be able to hold the congress. There are many reasons why the election of last November was not a fair test of the strength of the republican party generally. The congress in session between March and December of next year—to give its members the benefit of doubt—is a very different congress from that which will be in session after March 4, 1923. The congress which will be in session after March 4, 1923, will be a congress which will be called together by a president who will be in his office because of the support given him by the republican party in congress. The congress which will be in session between March and December of next year will be a congress which will be called together by a president who will be in his office because of the support given him by the republican party in congress

CARPENTER'S WORLD TRAVELS
(Copyright, 1922, by Frank G Carpenter)

Paris, 1922

F. G. Carpenter

London sulks in the dumps, feeding its idle on government doles, Berlin, drunk at its mad Belshazzar feast, dances on a volcano with Mene, Mene, Tekel, Upharsin writ on its walls, Vienna, half naked and starving, fiddles like Nero while the Austrian capital burns, but gay, joy loving, pleasure-mad Paris is busy at work The hordes of American tourists rushing hither and thither under conductors who show only the battle fields, the great picture galleries and, I regret to say also the sparsely clad females at Montmartre and the Folies Bergeres may not see it, but I find work everywhere

The streets are thronged with traffic Tram cars and great motor buses whose fronts look like a locomotives snowplow are loaded with laborers and clerks going back and forth to the shops, taxi-cabs rushing like fury wind their way in and out through big motor trucks loaded with boxes and bales, great farm-carts in from the country drawn by two or three huge Percheron horses fight for their places among donkey wagons and motorcycle delivery boys, even men are harnessed up and dragging goods through the street. The vehicles are beyond description, and they all move on the run It makes no difference in what quarter of the city, whether on the boulevards or the side streets, there is no safety for the foot passenger and the tourist is on the continual dodge to prevent being trampled on by Paris at work

A Beehive of Industry

Indeed, this city is now one great bee hive of industry with tens of thousands of individual workshops and great factories outside making steel and iron machinery railway and building materials airplanes and automobiles Only this week I visited one establishment which covers more than one hundred and twenty acres and has sixteen thousand hands as busy as sailors. It has seventy acres of buildings and is loaded with orders It makes automobiles trucks and buses tractors cycle cars and almost everything that goes upon wheels with gasoline as a fuel I refer to the great Renault factory, which makes an expensive high class car It had tens of thousands of men employed on munitions and motor transportation during the war Now figuratively speaking it has turned from the sword to the plowshare and with standardized methods, manufactures for peace The factory still employs two thousand women although it had eight thousand when the armistice came It has fourteen thousand men and expects to increase its force right along

There is another motor car factory known as the Citroen devoted to cars like our flivvers or the well known "Tin Lizzies only of a lower horsepower and a much finer body It is running to its capacity and can not supply the demand Nearly all of the establishments that work on munitions have been changed over to supply industrial needs They are making typewriters, farming machinery furniture and paper or building materials for the reconstruction work in the north

Some Industries of Paris

Even in Paris itself there are numerous manufacturing centers each ward having its own branch of industry One district, for instances had leather shops and carriage shops and another is devoted to making new bodies and designing equipment for automobiles At Grenelle there are chemical works and at Saint Denis Clichy Saint Quen and Pantin are sugar factories The principle specialty here is luxury products such as jewelry dresses furs and fine notions The city manufactures also clocks and bronzes fine porcelains wall papers and tapestries It is famous for its embroideries dress trimmings and artificial flowers, and it has dye work and glass works and chemical factories

Indeed, Paris makes everything under the sun from pins to locomotives from buttons to flying machines and from gloves to beautiful gowns It has more than twenty thousand women who are engaged on parts of ladies dress In contradistinction of the complete costumes and they turn out a product worth about ten million dollars a year It has thousands working on corsets not only for Paris but for all parts of France and for shipment abroad It has five thousand furniture shops, each employing three or four hands The furniture does not compare in duability with ours made by machinery but it is exquisitely carved and a great deal is gilded There are two thousand shops here making watches to the value of five million dollars per annum and other thousands making Articles de Paris which means notions and fancy goods of all sorts including jewelry artificial flowers and vanity bits of leather horn lone and ivory In fact the French are producing almost anything one can imagine and the make everything well

Fine Gowns for America

One of the big industries of Paris is in supplying millinery and gowns for the rich of the fashionable world Just now the best market is the United States and every American woman who passes through carries home Parisian frocks and hats Those who have several should watch out for the customs According to our tariff laws no person can bring into the United States more than $100 worth of new clothes without paying duty tore examine ones baggage and there is no way of oiding the tax without lying It is $100 or more to get even a low gown made by one of the best Paris dressmakers and costumes of velvet of silk range from $200 upwards Lower prices may be put on bills which the tourists take home, but our custom officers are watchful and such frauds are often detected

Smuggling today is more difficult than it was in the past It used to be that thousands of rich Americans came to Paris once a year to replenish their wardrobes and the wealthier often went back with eight or ten trunks filled with dresses Many would not even wear the dresses before sailing, and others would put on a half dozen different frocks in a day discarding each in a few minutes in order to declare that it had been worn Some sewed old labels into their gowns and had other schemes to make the new things look old.

It was the same with some of the New York dressmakers who brought in gowns without paying duty and with the Paris modists who took orders for future delivery and had the dresses carried home by American friends This wholesale cheating has practically stopped although many things still escape the customs and most tourists carry home with them two or three new gowns and hats

How the French Sell their Dresses

Paris sets the fashion for all the world Most of our large stores send their buyers for gowns hats and other Paris specialties to be sold the next season Such buyers will take home only one dress or hat of a kind to show in the windows and then take orders for copies Such articles are called models and making them is a regular business They are designed by the great artists in the famous dressmaking houses and such houses have exhibitions to which the American buyers are invited by card These occasions are quite ceremonial and beautiful women employed for the purpose walk back and forth wearing the gowns while the buyers pick out such as they think will appeal to the American market One famous dressmaker this year showed his creations at a supper given in a beautiful garden the mannequins walking about among the tables Later there are exhibitions of the same model for individual purchasers and copies are subject to sale or export by the establishment in which they originate

How to get One Cheap

One can pay almost anything she pleases for a fine gown in Paris The great dressmakers are artists and they charge for their special skill The ordinary French women however does not patronize them nor does she set her foot on the Rue de la Paix except to go window shopping among the gorgeous jewels displayed on each side of the street Indeed she hardly knows where Worth Callot Jenny or Paquin are located unless by some lucky chance she has an invitation to their exhibition of new styles each season She never thinks of buying hats or gowns at the big houses If she is fairly well off she studies the style-books and photographs of the frocks designed by these masters and then goes to her own little dressmaker who lives three or four flights up on a court in a back street and together they plan out and copy the famous model she chooses In this way she gets her dress for one-fourth the price

An American woman told me this week how she waited in a dressmaking establishment while one of the Paris society leaders the wife of a prominent French newspaper owner explained to the dressmaker just how many steel buttons there were to be on each side and how many loops of ribbon were to be tacked on the back of the gown she had ordered The lady had been to an exhibition by Worth and picked out the design but the little dressmaker made the costume

A Visit to French Dressmaker

The other day I went with my daughter who has been living in Paris the last two years to buy a new gown She had learned thrifty methods in France, and the establishment we visited had no sign facing the street It is just like one of thousands whence come the clothes not of the actresses wives and daughters of rich profiteers but of the French women of moderate circumstances, who now (on account of high prices must make every franc count

We directed our taxi to a narrow street in the business section of Paris The dressmaker lived on a court and we climed up three flights of stairs because the house had not even one of the pill boxes that serve as elevators in most French business buildings Madame Marie [illegible] She [illegible] of the new fashions The material of the dress had already been chosen, and the wholesale dealer had sent in a bolt of lovely brown velvet to be tried for the effect Then the little fitter Mademoiselle Jeanne was called in and under her magic like the mango tree of the Hindus the beautiful creation grew under our eyes Jeanne threw an end of velvet over my daughter's shoulder, she put a pin here made a tuck there and presto a copy of one of the most famous dresses designed this week by one of the masters sprang into being A twist of another kind of material formed a draped sleeve and within five minutes we had in the mirror the gown as it will look when the material is cut and all the stitches put in The French seldom have patterns and each dress is made as it were on its future wearer

Hats While You Wait

I am told it is the same with fine headgear There are read-made hats such as one sees in the windows but the artistic Paris milliner finds his hat on the head of the buyer The scissors clip out the lines most becoming and with a plentiful supply of pins to hand and twist the trick is performed I saw a woman now wears some sort of a wreath on her hair in the evening and this she buys at a department store or in some small shop which has copied the creations of the Rue de la Paix

The styles I see here in Paris do not resemble the ones I left in New York nor those of the nouveau riche we brought across on our liner The short skirts which call down so much wrath on the heads of our American flappers passed away from Paris more than two years ago and the skirts of the present are so long they come down to the ankle The necks are cut high and even when there are no sleeves at all the neck is as high as that of our afternoon dresses at home As to the rolled stockings I am told it has never been known in wooded Paris

Window Dressing in Paris.

There is nothing which shows so well how Paris is working as a visit to the shops There are tens of thousands of stores all full of goods and all busy and outside on the streets are tables pile high with bargains and customers pushing and scrambling to buy The store windows are a museum of fine stuffs in velvets and new creations and some this shops have window displays worth a fortune I stopped this afternoon on a fashionable street before a store not much big get than a piano box whose window contained a show of wrist watches such as I venture to say you cannot find in New York or Chicago Behind the plate glass against a background of black velvet were scores of wrist watches each as small as a postage stamp and many but little thicker One the size of my thumb nail had a face of platinum encircled with diamonds and the bracelet to which it was fastened was of pearls exquisitely set Had I a sweetheart I would have walked to Berlin to buy it

A great part of Paris now goes to work in the motor buses that serve all sections of the city First-class passengers sit in the front, while those who pay the lower second-class fare must ride in the rear

Other watches were fastened to bands of silk Some were set in rings and some hung on bracelets decorated with diamonds In a store farther on I saw a collection of nothing but cigarette cases gold and silver and diamond strewn and another that of a famous dressmaker was a doll dressed as a model It represented a new coiffure and the face was so artistic all that the doll might hold an honored place in a museum

The store windows here are better dressed than those of America But the larger establishments they can hardly compete with New York but in the little shops they are far more artistic than ours This is so of even the meanest shops in out of the quarters of Paris Take a fruit store Fresh rosy cheeked peaches lie in a bed of white cotton straw Ferries as big as a hen's egg are each wrapped in a green leaf and half a dozen blue plums or three or four bunches of grapes are laid out on the table as though for a banquet It is the same in the grocery stores where squashes and turnips green beans and peas are piled up as at one of our country fairs and the chickens and game are dressed with their heads tucked under their wings The chickens have on their breasts with a little printed price mark pinned to the center of each rosy back They are clean and tempting to kiss and I do not wonder they sell

These displays all stop with the evening The stores which open at about 8 a m close at 7 p m when every window is covered with a shutter that slides down from the top making a wall of sheet iron over the front At the same time the clerks leave crawling out through a little door in this iron about a yard high a long procession of women and men going forth single file like so many dogs They straighten up immediately however and walk off so jaunty that one would never imagine they had been working all day

In the Department Stores

Paris has a hundred small shops and five stores where Chicago or Philadelphia each has one The trade union is one of individual shops and every little store has its specialty But there are a few department stores some of which compare and compare favorably with those of the States Here the business done is enormous The buildings themselves are thronged and the sidewalks are given up to counters where one may see men women and children pulling over the goods and fighting for bargains In the small shops there are often no price marks but in the department stores the goods have tags with plain figures and the tourist buying more than he should

The clerks everywhere are uniformly courteous and almost always well dressed The women clerks wear only black and the salesmen like the old fashioned preacher Many of the clerks have luxuriant whiskers from France the barbers on many face I may say also on the head for the bankers have seven bald heads where there is not a hair there are as many long beards as all circus and I have seen the aged clerk is waiting on me who looks as though they had never been shaved I like to study the whiskers They are beautifully combed and now and then parted in the middle The kinds of beards wear mustaches and some such force in bringing back the memories of Bismarck and Kruger and ready to fight

Stores Owned by Clerks.

There are several department stores here that are business running into the tens of millions of dollars a year One of these is on the cooperative plan with the clerks among the stockholders I understand the shares are steadily increasing in value from year to year and that every clerk in the store gets a percentage on the amount paid him as wages

In that store all employes are fed free of charge They have a breakfast at noon which is much [illegible] hour [illegible] It consists of soup [illegible] alles and a dessert There [illegible] hundred men at [illegible] when I [illegible] the dining room and several [illegible] women at meals in the [illegible] The dining hall seats two hundred feet long and [illegible] half an acre It has [illegible] windows [illegible] that [illegible] has a bottle of wine at his place and that every one had [illegible] at the close of the meal [illegible] serve a certain [illegible]

Poor Business Methods

In many respects it seems to me that the merchants of Paris have [illegible] much to [illegible] The ordinary [illegible] no cash register nor cash [illegible] even a cash key or cash [illegible] When you make a purchase the clerk must carry the article to the [illegible] for bookkeepers who sit behind the counter at one end or in the middle of the store Here she shows [illegible] and her sale slip to the [illegible] who copies the items [illegible] in his ledger with pen and [illegible]

Just [illegible] bought at the Bazar de l'Hotel de Ville a basket [illegible] as a writing desk girl who sold it [illegible] bent double as she showed [illegible] through the aisles over the [illegible] of the [illegible] bookkeepers [illegible] the store I took out my watch [illegible] and that it took me just [illegible] minutes to have the purchase recorded and order the goods sent to my [illegible] I [illegible] a long queue [illegible] more at [illegible] bookkeepers and then go to the [illegible] Paris [illegible] every one in New York or [illegible]

Frank G. Carpenter

Mr Carpenter will write next Sunday of "The World's Greatest Eating Place" the ten thousand hotels of Paris and the eleven million bottles of wine in the cellars of Rheims

France is making "flivvers" of her own that are much better looking than the American car with which they compete On account of the heavy tax on motor horsepower and the high cost of gasoline these baby automobiles of light weight and low powered engines sell by the thousands

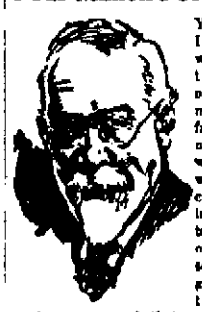
You Can Now Try This Newer Form Of Iron At My Expense

I First Compounded This Remarkable Remedy For My Own Neighbors And Their Praise Of It Has Spread So Rapidly That Now Over Four Million People Use It Annually--Read My Unusual Offer Below.



Years ago I began to wonder at the great number of my own friends and neighbors who were always ailing, complaining and doctoring, without ever seeming to get any better Both working men and their wives were frequently all tired out in the evening, and a great many were weak, nervous and run-down. One had pains in the back and thought he had kidney trouble. Another had pains around the heart, palpitations and dizziness, and was sure he was suffering from heart disease. Still others had nervous headaches, floating spots before the eyes, tender spots along the spine and a great variety of alarming symptoms.

For years I made a special study of this condition, consulting a great number of physicians and chemists. An immense number of investigations by physicians all over the country showed that three people out of every four we meet lack 100% iron in their blood. Lack of iron in the blood is the greatest of all devitalizing weaknesses. It is the iron in your blood that enables you to get the nourishment out of your food Without iron, nothing you eat does you any good. Your heart, lungs and kidneys and all your vital organs get their nourishment from the blood stream, and when the blood lacks iron and is thin, pale and watery, you may suffer from the symptoms of a great number of diseases when the real and true cause of all your trouble is a lack of iron in the blood.

In the old days people often took metallic iron, which some physicians claim is not absorbed at all. In compounding this newer form of iron which I call Nuxated Iron, I employed a special form of iron, which is like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples. Unlike the older forms of iron, it will not injure the teeth nor disturb the stomach, and it is ready for almost immediate absorption and assimilation by the blood. It is the people whose blood is rich in iron who possess great strength, force and energy. If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test:

Cut out trial coupon and go to any druggist and get your first trial package of Nuxated Iron; then see how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired Next take two 5-grain tablets of Nuxated Iron three times a day after meals for two weeks, then test your strength again and see how much you have gained An astonishing number of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while, have greatly improved their health and increased their strength, energy and endurance simply by taking this newer form of iron

Trial Coupon

Fill in this coupon with your name and addressand take it to any druggist in your city. Deposit with him the price of one regular full-size bottle of Nuxated Iron. This is not a payment, but a deposit only. If you are not more than delighted with the results obtained by two weeks' use of Nuxated Iron, simply return the unused remainder to your own druggist who will promptly refund your money. We will repay the druggist the full amount he refunds upon receipt of the coupon and wrapper

MOTOR BEARING OF OAKLAND WAS TESTED IN WAR

Only the tried and tested in mechanical equipment were used during the late war and when even the tried and tested did not come up to specifications there was developed equipment to meet the severe requirements of war time activity

Among the notable developments during the war was an interchangeable motor bearing which was designed and developed especially for the Liberty motors themselves the great outstanding mechanical achievement contributed by the United States to the cause of the allies

It is this same type of bearing used so successfully in Liberty motors that has been standardized in the Oakland 6 44 models as crankshaft bearings and that so far has made an enviable record

The Oakland interchangeable crankshaft bearing is declared to be the most accurately built motor bearing today The measurements are held to one twelfth the size of a human hair

The same accuracy which has been built into the bearing is maintained in the machining of the crankcase reported to be one of the most closely finished shafts made The main bearing bores are machined to an accuracy of 0005 of an inch The main bearings are made within an accuracy of 0003 of an inch

The great advantage of this accuracy lies in the fact that it enables assembly into the crankcase without reaming burning or scraping They are assembled without force guaranteeing the same kind of performance for every motor in which they are used

This results in the interchangeability feature So close are the crankshaft bearings crankshaft and component parts machined that in case of replacement a bearing may be obtained from any Oakland service station and fitted into place by hand. This bearing will afford the same bearing clearance and function under exactly the same conditions as the bearing placed in the motor at the factory

It is likewise claimed that the babbitt lining has a greater density than any now used with 50 per cent greater tensile strength This babbitt lining is bounded with pure tin which has a higher melting point than the bearing metal itself Regardless of how hot the bearing should become due to lack of oil or any other condition the babbitt lining will not melt loose from the bronze backing due to this difference in melting point.

Identify Spark Plugs.

BEWARE MOTOR SOCIETIES WARNS SECRETARY CALEY

By NEA Service

WASHINGTON Dec 3 A warning against joining fraudulent automobile associations has been issued here by Fred Caley secretary of the National Motorists association

The warning comes after attention of the association officials had been called by the organization throughout the country of various societies which were selling membership to automobile owners

The men behind these alleged fraudulent societies open up an office in either state or national capital and from it send circulars to motorist prospects Their fees have ranged from $8 to $19 60

The inducement is an offer to furnish automobile accessories at from 25 to 50 per cent discount free touring and other information and a certificate or other identification of membership in the society

THE MOTORISTS' PROBLEMS'

By WILLIAM H. STEWART, JR.

Motor Department: I have a Ford sedan driven 6,000 miles. Lately first cylinder pumps oil badly, fouls plug about every 25 miles. Can you advise remedy for same? Thinking of installing new rings. Would you advise regular Ford rings, or rings such as so called lookproof or quick seating piston rings? Your advice on above will be greatly appreciated.—A. B.

Make sure that this cylinder has good compression and that the spark plug and coil for this cylinder are not defective. Sometimes a weak coil or bad plug will cause the trouble. Badly worn rings permit the oil to pass, but this trouble can be remedied by installing new rings. Great care must be taken to fit the new rings properly. It is not our policy to recommend any particular make of ring. Your nearest service station will best advise you.

Motor Department: Please give me instructions for adjusting the brakes.—Reader.

Jack up the rear wheels and set the emergency brake part way. Tighten the bands until you cannot move the wheels. Then loosen the brake later and see if the wheels move freely, as you will lose a great deal of power if they bind. Do the same with the service brake, but have some one apply the brake for you.

Motor Department: When I press the accelerator on my Buick car my engine does not always respond. At such times there is a hissing or sucking sound that seems to come from some part of the exhaust manifold. This trouble only happens at times. The vacuum system seems to work properly as there is always plenty of gasoline in the carburetor. What do you suspect the trouble to be.—Novice.

The noise is probably due to the air being drawn in at the hot air intake around the manifold. The air valve may be out of adjustment or the stem caught by grit. Work out the grit by pouring gasoline down along the stem and moving the valve.

Motor Department: Would you please let me know what they mean when they say the car is geared four to one, and how can I find out how to do it? Thanking you in advance, I am—J. V.

The rear axle ratio is usually meant by such a term. You can determine the gear ratio of the different gears by counting the teeth of each and dividing the number of teeth of the smaller gear into the larger. The term four to one gear ratio means that the crank shaft of the engine completes four revolutions to one of the rear wheels. From this you will note that no gear reduction takes place in the transmission, but that direct drive is considered.

Motor Department—I have a 1917 Dodge which has been run something like 16,000 miles, and is still in good shape mechanically, but two or three times have found the pistons stuck. I know that it is not caused from overheating. I use the heavy grade of lubricating oil. Could that be the trouble?—N. M.

You do not state under what conditions the pistons stick. It is assumed that this happens after car has been standing over night, etc. If a good grade of oil is used and of sufficient quantity such trouble should not occur. Perhaps a small water leak causes the pistons to rust and stick. Be sure to change oil of crank case about every thousand miles.

Motor Department: Having used radiator cement to stop leaks, have since had trouble with motor heating and water boiling. Will you please tell me if the same clogs it and causes heating? Is there any other way to clean it?—R. O.

Radiator cement has a tendency to close up any small openings in a radiator and so would have a slight tendency to clog. This is not usually so serious as to cause overheating. I am inclined to think that your radiator was clogged before the cement was used. Try cleaning the cooling system with washing soda, as that is probably all it needs.

Motor Department: Please tell me in your paper what "setting a magneto" means and how it should be done. I am very interested in mechanics and can do most of my repairs, but this is something new to me.—Reader.

Setting a magneto to an engine should only be done by an expert. Set No. 1 cylinder at top of compression stroke. Turn armature in direction it should go until breaker points are just ready to separate, spark retarded. Fasten armature to its driving shaft. Note where distributor brush is located and run a wire from that contact to No. 1 spark plug. Continue with the distributor points in rotation and connect to spark plugs according to firing order.

Motor Department: When the engine of my Ford car has been running idle and the throttle is suddenly opened wide it chokes and misfires for a few seconds until it gains more speed and then it runs perfectly. The ignition is good and it acts this way no matter how the carburetor is set. What is the reason for this?—Owner.

Any engine may choke if the throttle is opened too wide suddenly. Under ordinary conditions choking of the engine is due to a worn needle valve which allows too rich a mixture to be fed at low speeds and the correct mixture after the engine gains speed.

Motor Department: Please settle an argument as to the correct name of the coil used with an ignition system. Some call it a spark coil, some an induction and others a transformer. Which is right?—B. L.

They are all correct, but the name most frequently used is induction coil. This is because the battery current of low voltage induces another current of high voltage. As this transforms the voltage it is properly called a transformer coil, or a step-up transformer. The name "spark coil" was formerly confined to a single wound coil used with the make and break system of ignition, but is now applied to any coil which will give a spark strong enough to jump an air gap.

Motor Department: With the coming on of cold weather I wish to know what to do with my storage battery as I do not intend to run the car after the first snow flies. Shall I put it into wet storage and have it kept charged all winter at fifty cents a month, or dry storage at $6 for the season (about five months)? or leave it in my cellar, doing nothing with it except to keep the plates covered with water, and then in the spring having it fully recharged at a cost of $1.50.—Owner.

If the temperature of the cellar never gets lower than a few degrees below freezing point keep battery there and have it charged about every month. If it should stand five months without recharging it would be ruined by sulphation. Find a charging station where they will recharge a battery for less than $1.50.

NOT A CIRCUS BUT JUST A SHIPMENT OF BUICKS

Upon first glance it appears that the above is a part of a circus train. However, it is nothing more than a shipment of 16 Buick cars received by the Dixon Motor company a week ago. During the past week another shipment of the same nature and size was received.

The shortage of automobile freight cars has made it necessary for manufacturers to employ the use of flat cars and use large canvas coverings in sending out their products to the dealers.

Similar shipments are being made to all points in the United States.

HELPFUL HINTS.

When driving up a hill don't wait until the engine almost stalls before changing to a lower gear. If you cannot negotiate the hill easily on high gear, then shift to second speed before the engine labors and knocks. By so doing you will avoid much engine bearing trouble.

The accelerator on some cars is very sensitive and the novice finds difficulty in proper control of the foot throttle driving over rough roads. A simple foot rest installed to fit at the ball of the foot will prove advantageous. It is worth trying.

Don't try to make every hill in high speed. Nothing is to be gained by so doing. Your gear set is designed to meet such requirements. If you persist in this practice you will soon find it necessary to refit the engine occasionally in order to save the bearings. This of course applies to steep and dangerous grades.

Get into the habit of putting the car into low or second speed when about to go down a long steep hill even if you do not intend to use the engine as a brake. It will give you a sense of security. As a matter of fact the engine should be used as a brake occasionally in order to save the brakes. This of course applies to steep and dangerous grades.

Many new motorists neglect to practice backing with the result that when they have to do so they hit something. Choose a wide open space and practice until you can control the car just as well backing as when going forward. Starting and stopping on a hill is also good practice. Do not wait until an emergency arises and then fail. Serious accidents occur on this account.

Editor's Note—Readers are invited to send in queries concerning their motor problems to this department for answer. They are reminded however that several weeks must elapse before the answers can appear. Address inquiries to Motor Department, Daily Times.

The Buick Six-Cylinder Sport—$1625

Perfect Fan Operation

Tension on the fan belt of all Buick models is maintained continuously by a spring which takes up the stretch and wear of the belt. This figure contributes directly to better engine performance by insuring proper cooling at all times.

As strikingly beautiful as it is luxuriously appointed, the Buick Six-cylinder Sport Roadster brings new zest to motoring.

Riding on the long wheelbase Buick chassis with the distinctive Buick spring suspension and the famous, powerful Buick valve-in-head engine, this superbly fitted roadster contains every refinement for care-free travel. The fine leather upholstery, the shining nickeled fittings, the complete instrument board, windshield wings, tailored top and snug fitting storm curtains are among the many features that distinguish this car in appearance and in comfort.

Anywhere you meet this de-luxe motor car, it not only is the center of attention but motorists also mark it as the car that sets distances at naught and makes driving a continuous enjoyment.

SOME POINTERS AS TO CARE OF CAR IN WINTER

Preparations for use of the automobile during cold weather should include the following precautions

A mixture of denatured alcohol and water should go into the cooling system About one quart of alcohol to a gallon of water will stand up well down to zero temperature

The carburetor should be cleaned out and adjusted for winter driving

Blow out the heating chamber and passages frequently to eliminate carbon

Drain and flush out transmission case and refill with lighter lubricant

Keep the storage battery fully charged

Change oil every 500 miles of driving

Keep radiator front covered

Disconnecting the fan belt is dangerous as it may lead to overheating especially on long trips

Frozen radiator should not be thawed out by the engine Instead hot water or warming by some other means should be resorted to until the water flows

Engine should not be raced to heat it up That puts too great a strain on it

To keep the engine warm overnight apply an electric heater to the intake manifold or wrap asbestos around it

When it becomes necessary to turn a smooth shaft which dare not be disfigured, as would occur with the use of a pipe wrench, the arrangement known as the Spanish windlass may be effectively employed The tools required are a piece of rope and a heavy stick The rope is doubled and the stick is passed through the loop The free ends of the rope are then wrapped closely around the shaft A very powerful turning effort can be produced by this arrangement

TWO GIRLS MAKE GET-AWAY BUT ARE FOUND SATURDAY

Two young girls wards of the county who were patients at the general hospital made their get away Friday night, but were found Saturday morning by Juvenile Officer R. L. Yates at Burkburnett

They were brought back and placed in the ward at the hospital the windows of which are barred

The girls stated that the reason they had run away from the hospital was because they had been promised if they would go in the institution and behave themselves that they would be taken on an automobile ride

Coming back to Wichita Falls one of the girls said. Well I guess we are getting that ride right now They told the officer that a woman from this city had secured a car for them and that as soon as they made their escape they went to Burkburnett

GRAND JURY FOR DECEMBER TERM TO BE CALLED SOON

The members of the grand jury of the December term of the 30th district court will receive their summonses during the coming week according to District Clerk A P Kerr who said Saturday that the list would be turned over to Sheriff Smith during the first part of the week

Judge H B Wilson who is now holding a special term of court in Young county appointed a commission at the last term of court This commission met at once and selected the grand jurors The names were placed in a sealed envelope and placed in custody of the district clerk

The December term of the 30th district court opens on December 18. Judge Wilson will empanel the grand jury on Monday morning and it is believed that this body will work the week before Christmas A large number of cases await the investigation

HOLIDAY PLACES CRIMP IN WEEK'S TAX COLLECTIONS

Collections of state and county taxes fell off slightly during the week due to the Thanksgiving holiday The total collection of 1922 property tax fell short of the $10,000,000 mark to which it had climbed and remained during the past four weeks

The 1922 taxes collected by M. L. Tittle during the week amounted to $7,326 while the total redemptions amounted to only $640

KNOWLEDGE FOR CAR OWNERS

Interesting and Important Facts That Every Motorist Should Know.

Never dip rags and cotton waste into the gasoline tank to obtain fuel for priming

The differential is one place where too much of even the best oil will cause damage.

With the exception of the throttle fittings there are no parts of a carburetor to be lubricated

Sometimes the rubbing together of the floor boards will cause squeaks which are hard to locate

Kerosene should never be used in a cooling system as it has a tendency to rot the rubber hose

A good method of protecting the fan and distributor from water is to fashion a boot from a short section of an old inner tube

Very often the anchorage bolts of motor supports work loose causing annoying squeaks motor rending and inexplainable vibration

A common cause for failure of pressure is excessive dilution of the oil in the crank case which prevents the building up of pressure when flowing through the bearings

Bothersome rattles may be quickly overcome by inserting pieces of rubber between the two vibrating or chafing surfaces An old inner tube can be used for this purpose

A fan belt that has become saturated with oil and grease so as to impair its efficiency should be thoroughly washed in soap and water or treated with a belt dressing.

From time to time it is a wise plan to test a spark plug for leakage squirt oil around the base and into the shell—the leaks will immediately show up by bubbles

It will be found effective to apply thin coat of shellac followed by several layers of tape and thin coats of shellac to protect the radiator hose from oil and other destructive matter

No part of a car is of more vital importance than the effective performance of the brakes and anything less than 100 per cent braking efficiency may mean loss of life

When "blowing out a motor by means of kerosene or some other chemical an old hose connection at least three feet long may be slipped over the muffler tail pipe and arranged to lead the carbon laden exhaust gas to a pail behind the car

Lay out an old piece of carpet underneath the car and with a handful of tools and an oil can crawl under and make careful inspection The bolts that hold the engine pan and splash guards can be tried for tightness likewise the spring clip nuts This may eliminate some of the rattling Clean out the clutch housing and clogged drain holes in the pan Look over the radiator support bolts and test engine support bolts The underpart of the battery box may be corroded and can be scraped Hammer around lightly for loose parts clean wherever it is necessary and lubricate thoroly all working parts

Use none but oils of the best grade particularly for the engine A cheap grade oil burns at a low temperature depositing carbon in the cylinder head It thins out much under heat causing friction and shutting down the power It is more read ily sucked up above the pistons where it burns adding more carbon The thin oil fails to seal the piston rings and compression and power are lost As it is inferior in lubricating qualities it does not protect the main bearings as it should This results in reducing the power increasing the wear making the engine knock long before it should or possibly burning out a bearing A cheap oil is dear at any price

It is a good practice in slippery weather about to apply the brakes without releasing the clutch until the momentum of the car is considerably reduced

Connecting rod bearings should be tested by tapping them very gently with a hammer and watching for play or the rattling of bearings rock the shaft a little with pet cocks open if this can be done the bearings are all right

All metal parts of the battery which are not lead coated should be kept covered with vaseline

New oil should be applied to the transmission and differential gears about every 4000 miles

MOTORCYCLE NOTES

Among the spares to take with one on week end tours are Sparking plug section of main and two detachable links a spare belt and two fasteners if it is a belt drive machine valve with spring and cooter complete tin of assorted nuts bolts and washers magneto carbon brush contact breaker rocker arm platinum point a new tube and possibly a new tire

Also make sure that the puncture outfit is complete on a trip and equipped with a liberal supply of patches and repairing canvas a tube of usable solution tire valve tubing and valve parts and that all wires high tension and otherwise are sound and uncracked that there are no big cuts in the tires no leaks in the oil tanks none of those smudges of oil around the plug or valve caps that betray a faulty washer

THANKSGIVING PROGRAM BY YALE AVENUE CHURCH

The ladies of the Yale Avenue Women's Missionary Society of the Evangelical church gave the people of the Sibley Taylor addition quite a treat on Thursday evening With the help of the children of the Yale Avenue Sunday school and some of the young folks of the addition, an excellent short program was rendered to the surprise of many As the time was so short for the training of the children even the most hopeful and the best wishers of the society were fearful that the training would not be sufficient for the children to have learned their parts but we must say to the credit of those who had this in hand and to the children the expressions We heard from every one who attended and spoke of it told us that it was an excellent entertainment and just the right length

Another surprise of the evening was the taking of a collection at the close of the program in which funds were solicited for the benefit of the Christmas tree for this section in which we are trying to raise funds to supply the needs of every child for the Christmas season and make them feel that some one cares for them

At the close an appeal was made for every one present to try to attend some Sunday school next Sunday and stay for the church service and a cordial invitation was extended to all who could worship with us to come out next Sunday and help us out There will be Sunday school at 9 45 followed by preaching at 11 a m by the pastor Subject of the morning sermon The Persecuted Christian and Why We Should Not Be Discouraged Junior league 2 30 p m Senior league 6 30 p m At the 7 30 p m hour we will have our old pastor with us and he will bring us the message and I am sure he has something good for every one of us and we will be glad to hear him Come out to these services and hear the words of the Lord and let us help to bring His kingdom to earth as in Heaven

The services for the week will be as follows Young Ladies Missionary Circle will meet Monday night 7 15 p m On account of the box supper of the Carrigan Mothers club on Tuesday evening we will not have choir practice but will meet in our regular Bible study service Wednesday evening and the subject is a very vital one and one that should be studied by everyone whether he be a Christian or a sinner The subject is A Sinner without God and What He must do to Be Saved Come and bring your bible and help us make a study of this great message—W D COOK Pastor

BACK-TRAILING ON THE OLD FRONTIERS

Drawing by CHARLES M. RUSSELL

When the United States bought the Louisiana territory from Napoleon in 1803 it was not from any need of land for it still had millions of fertile acres east of the Mississippi. The purchase was made to forestall complications with foreign powers and Napoleon himself whose ambition was supposed to be the mastery of the whole world or with Great Britain to which the western country was sure to fall in case France could be defeated. Possession of Louisiana was necessary to our free navigation of the Mississippi.

The vast domain thus added to our territories was terra incognita. Aside from its strategic importance no one knew what it was good for. So Lewis and Clark were sent out from the frontier post of St. Louis to find a route to the Pacific and to report on what the new country was like. The only commercial asset these explorers found which was immediately available was an abundance of fur-bearing animals. Fur may be called the gold of that period and the news that there was plenty of it in the Rocky Mountains lured many an intrepid spirit. Of the border companies of traders proceeded at once up the Missouri to barter for peltries with the Indians and posts were built and rendezvous were arranged in remote fastnesses of the mountains where they carried on a perilous but very profitable traffic. At the same time there went into the far west many independent adventurers to hunt and trap on their own account.

The lowest ranks of these soldiers of fortune were the free trappers and most romantic [illegible] their own [illegible] and self-[illegible] of the fur [illegible] under strict discipline [illegible] personal initiative. The [illegible] type of men who were bound by the [illegible] to their employers for what [illegible] they possessed.

But the free trappers were accountable to nobody and each went his own way taking the full amount of whatever profit his labors brought. Going alone or in small bands who acknowledged no captain and would split up whenever they were moved by a new mood each was a law unto himself and relied on his trusty rifle. They were men picked by nature as Horace Kephart said in his book on trappers entitled In the Old West for great enterprises and great deeds.

It was not any love of gain for its own sake that drew the free trappers into the wilderness. To them a pack of beaver skins was a mere gambler's stake, to be squandered riotously after the fashion of Jack ashore. What did compel them to a life of endless wandering and extreme hazard was sheer lust of adventure and passion for that absolute irresponsible freedom that can be enjoyed only in a state of nature. Never in our history have there been pioneers who took greater hazards or who cut themselves off more completely from the civilization in which they were born. Nowhere and at no time have men of our race been thrown more upon their individual resources in unknown regions and through periods of greater peril, nor have there ever been characters more fully developed to stand such a strain.

Cut off from the influences of civilization forever warring with one Indian tribe and living with another it was inevitable that many of these men should revert toward the ways of white barbarians. And yet it would be a grave error an injustice to rate them with mere desperadoes and desperaces. The trapper whatever his faults was still river bred a man. Bravest of the brave, cool and sagacious in the strategy of border war, capable in any emergency, faithful to his code of honor, generous without stint to every one but his foes, loyal to the death, frankly contemptuous of laws and caste affectations. He was imperial in his self reliance, granting equal rights to others. There is something of the Viking in this fierce and lonely life, dominated for a time the vast plains and mountains of the west.

It was the trader and trapper who first explored and established the routes of travel which are now and always will be the highways of commerce. In the early days of the west and northwest these explorers were almost the only white men who penetrated the unknown regions. Their reports of the wonders they saw and the hardships they endured aroused in later generations of pioneers a desire to see for themselves the land of which they had read. Many of these later pioneers were men who had been trappers themselves and who had been lured to the west by the glowing accounts of their predecessors. Many of the most famous of the early explorers of the west were trappers and hunters who had been lured to the west by the glowing accounts of their predecessors. Many of the most famous of the early explorers of the west were trappers and hunters who had been lured to the west by the glowing accounts of their predecessors.

Many men even in the most territorial periods of the west have been [illegible] to the honor [illegible] young officer. Time was not granted him to embody in a permanent shape all of his personal experiences and strange adventures in three quarters of the globe. Considering the depth of physical labor he undergoing and the extent of the ground over which his wanderings spread it is almost surprising he found leisure to write so much.

"At the early age of seventeen Mr Ruxton quitted Sandhurst to learn the practical part of a soldier's profession in the civil wars of Spain. He obtained a commission in a squadron of lancers then attached to the division of General Diego Leon and was actively engaged in several of the most important combats of the campaign. For his marked gallantry on these occasions he received from Queen Isabella II the cross of the first class of the order of St. Ferdinand, an honor which was last [illegible] to [illegible] in the 53th regiment and it was while serving with [illegible] that he first became acquainted with the stirring scenes of Indian life which he has since so graphically described. His eager and [illegible] spirit [illegible] the same year [illegible] of the barrack room [illegible] directed his steps at once to the [illegible] tendous wilds tenanted only by the Red Indian or by the [illegible] American trapper.

The Good Samaratin Then and Now

By WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN

We are indebted to a certain lawyer for one of the greatest of Christ's parables and for the very practical truth He brought out therein—a truth that all of us to day need to ponder carefully

The occasion of this the parable of the Good Samaritan was not in only time when a lawyer's questio gave Christ an opportunity to launch a great truth

Matthew tells us of a time when a lawyer tempting him asked Which is the great commandment of the law"

Christ without rebuking the law yer for the spirit in which the question was asked proclaimed the first and great commandment Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart and with all thy soul and with all thy mind and then He announced the second which rests upon it and is like unto it Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself

This lawyer rendered a great service to the world without intending it and he did it without a fee.

An Age-Old Question.

So this other lawyer that Luke tells of stood up and tempted Christ as well What shall I do to inherit eternal life

What is written in the law" how readest thou" Christ said unto him

The lawyer responded with an accurate quotation from the law giving the first great commandment and the second which is like unto it

Thou hast answered right this do and thou shalt live Christ said unto him

But the lawyer was not content with this approval he asked another question willing to justify himself To this question Who is my neighbor? Christ made answer as He often did with a parable And then follows one of the most impressive and useful lessons in the Bible

The Good Samaritan

A man going from Jerusalem to Jericho—a lonely highway then as now — fell among thieves which stripped him of his raiment and departed leaving him half dead

To make the case as strong as possible a priest is described as passing by without offering aid then a Levite passed by ignoring the sufferer But a Samaritan—the Samaritans and the Jews cherished an inherited hatred of each other—as he journeyed came near and was moved with compassion

He bound up the wounds of the unfortunate traveler set him on his own beast took him to an inn and spent the night with him on the morrow he paid the host for the care already given the sufferer and pledged his credit for any additional expense that might be incurred

Then Christ turned to the lawyer and asked Which now of these three thinkest thou was neighbor unto him that fell among the thieves

There was but one answer that the lawyer could make He that showed mercy on him And Jesus said unto him Go and do thou likewise

A Lesson For the Ages.

The lawyer came to scoff and stayed to pray He came to entrap the Saviour and went away with a lesson that he could not forget and what is more he was made the conduit through which a wholesome truth flows down through the Ages

Go and do thou likewise" Go "Do" upon these two words the Christian life is built They are words of a single syllable—words of two letters each Christ was talking to all the world and to all time and He used language that all could understand

The student is inclined to indulge in long high sounding words He adds syllable from the time he enters school until he graduates His commencement oration is likely to contain more big words than he ever used before or will ever use again As soon as he gets out into life especially he descends— or rather rises—to the use of simple words

If one uses big words only those who are highly educated can understand him If he uses small words all can understand him The greatest thoughts of our lives and the deepest feelings of our hearts are expressed in plain strong words

A Favorite Word With Christ

Christ's words were not only strong but they expressed action The words he used to Him were sent away on errands of mercy and service They expressed faith to Him as a precious possession but in use in helping others Healing the sick was to Him a light of the world the water to thirsty souls a refuge for the tempted but expressed in action Love will Help Healing Saving And so there is the operation of faith

When one has crossed the line and entered the kingdom of love he enters a new life of service interested in others and desirous of helping them

Love is the fulfilling of the law Love worketh no ill to his neighbor Love is the fulfilling of the law

Love is the fulfilling of the law

Love is the fulfilling of the law

The Sensation of Silk Wigs

The Exclusive and Ultra-Modish" Mrs. Lydiard Wilson in Her Pale Pink Silk Wig with Blue Forget-Me-Nots.

Bobbed or Piled High, Decorously White or "Temperamentally Pink," They Capture the Fancy of Vanity Fair.

SILK WIGS Madame! Have you selected yours yet?

About twenty or so will do. You'll need a set for morning wear, something with a style running to simplicity, with a knot low on the neck and a little parting at the side, perhaps with waves rippling away in either direction.

[illegible] an afternoon set; a bloc de[illegible] done in a French twist with a [illegible] Spanish comb thrust through, and a white bob—pure white is PO-SITIVELY the LAST WORD ma cherie!—and [illegible] snappy little collection of black curls, a bit tousled. For no[illegible] is expected to remain a blonde or brunette or redhead [illegible] days a week THESE days, my lady!

And for evening you will have only wigs of silk and SUCH an [illegible]! One of palest pink, combed down temperamentally [illegible] a braid on either side, and the braid wound round and round [illegible] each ear and a spray of little, pink forget-me-nots crossing over the [illegible]

Another of same color piled [illegible] and slinky and clinging at the sides [illegible] coiffure of Fel[illegible]. And a third of sapphire blue and a fourth of emerald. But of course you'll express a different angle of your personality in each.

This is what they are doing in London. The vogue for silk wigs which started in Paris before the war and was lost during the four years of fashion suppression has cropped up again and is being observed in the smartest society. Such women as the exclusive and ultra-modish Mrs. Lydiard Wilson not only is indorsing the head covering of glossy, delicately-tinted silk, but she, together with her entire set, is wearing a variety of models upon divers occasions.

Silk wigs have made their appearance upon the English stage as well as in drawing room and ballroom. Miss Enid Stamp-Taylor, who gives a striking portrayal of famous lovers in literature and history at the Prince of Wales theatre, wears a snow white bob, and about her head, just above the ears, are wound two bands of red velvet, the color of her much abbreviated red velvet dress. A bunch of cherries decorates one side of the bands.

Of course, the white wig, be it a full court coiffure or a bristling bob, is the favorite. A young face and white hair! Brilliant, youthful eyes and a Martha Washington head-dress! Can anything be more alluring?

There surely is some good blown in by every wind, ill or otherwise. And the silver lining that floats on the breeze bringing the wigs is the fact that there will be beauteous covering for the large number of American women that statistics declare to be going bald. Not only wigs, but switches, rats, spit curls, transformations, buns, chignons, fascinators, "follow me lads," and other hirsute mysteries are destined to be nightly upon dressing tables, according to the statisticians who say what they say about women's loss of their crowning glory.

There is no reason for depression, mother. Wasn't Queen Elizabeth's head covered by a red wig? And didn't Mary of Scots wear a wig to the executioner's block? The lovely and naughty Queen Margot, wife of Henry IV, kept a train of pages with yellow hair to supply her with wigs.

Even Sappho, the sweet singer of the Mediterranean, wore a wig—or so it is said.

Miss Enid Stamp-Taylor, Whose Appearance in Her White Silk Bobbed Wig Before Theatregoers Helped Accustom London to This Latest Fad.

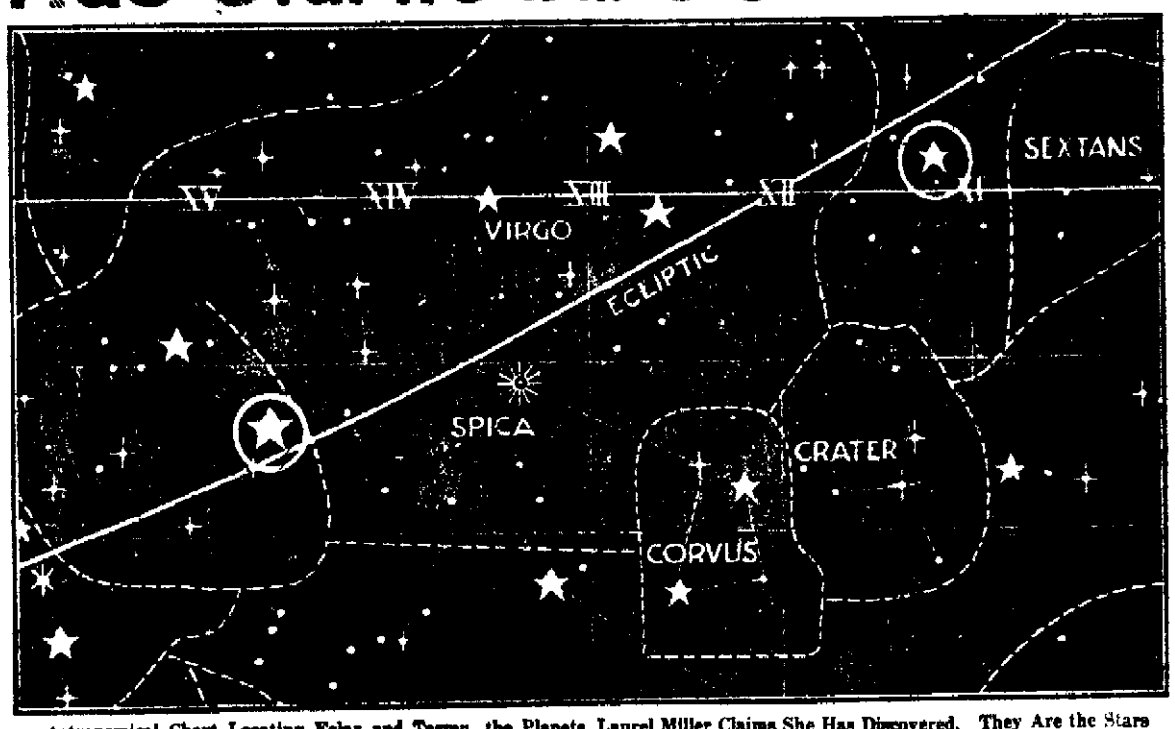
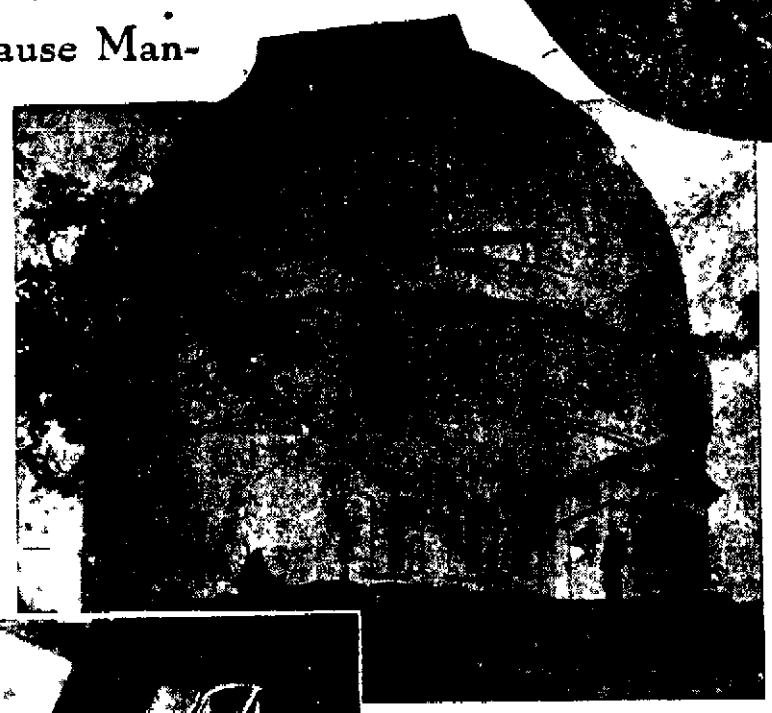
The Girl Astrologer Who Has Startled the Scientists



Astronomical Chart Locating Eslar and Tasmu, the Planets Laurel Miller Claims She Has Discovered. They Are the Stars Shown with Rings Around Them. Eslar, Left Centre, Is in the Sign of Libra, and Tasmu Is in the Upper Right Hand Corner. Neither Is Visible to the Naked Eye.

Miss Laurel Miller, 24-Year-Old Astrologist, Who Startled Astronomers at Washington Naval Observatory by Designating the Position of Eslar and Tasmu, and the Seal of Her Organization with Its Latin Motto, "Truth Conquers Everything."

"There Must Be Two More Planets, Because Mankind Feels Their Influence," Says Laurel Miller, and Astronomers, Having in Mind Recent Astounding Adventures with Powerful Telescopes, Acknowledge Her Claims.



The Dominion Astrophysical Observatory at Victoria, B. C., from Which, Recently, the Double Star Plaskett, 52,000,000,000 Miles from Earth, Was Discovered. With Such Instruments Astronomers Have Recently Made Astounding New Discoveries.

WHEN Laurel Miller was a girl at school she used to hide her favorite book inside her grammar and thus deceive the teacher into believing that she was a model of studiousness. Most of the girls in her class did the same thing. But, had the pedagogue looked behind the geography or history which she apparently was studying, she would not have found a love story, as she generally did when she unmasked some other girl's deceit. She would have probably been astounded to discover her pupil reading astrological and astronomical works of a nature far beyond the comprehension of most children of her years.

But now that Miss Miller has grown to be a young lady of 24 she has passed far ahead of her schoolmates in the race of success. For, her head still between the covers of a book about the stars (sometimes of her own authorship, it is true) she sends her mind on journeys into the immensity of the universe in which she finds the most astonishing things and draws the most startling conclusions.

Recently she completely won the attention of the star-wise astronomists at the Naval Observatory at Washington, D. C., by designating to them two new planets, "Tasmu" and "Eslar." She calculated their position in the firmament with such nicety that since then, the learned stargazers have been straining their eyes to establish as an astronomical fact what she told them is an astrological certainty. She isn't of the old school of astrologists who knew little of scientific value about the heavens. She is an astronomer as well as an astrologer and a five-minute talk with her is enough to demonstrate that she is a most unusual person.

Miss Miller's conception of life is that we are all little else than star creatures, clay taking the impress at birth of the influences of the ruling planets. The 10 fingers of the hand represent the 10 planets, she says, each one of which controls a sense.

She declares there are 10 senses, rather than five, supplementing sight, hearing, touch, taste and smell by

Perception or clairvoyance,
Inner hearing or clairaudience,
Acquiverness or the "key sense,"
Inclination or the guiding sense, and

Moreover, she says that the right hand represents the known and the left hand the unknown faculties.

Every [illegible] and every virtue, according to her philosophy, is formed and controlled by the stars. Destiny is inescapable. Man's body is only the dwelling place of the soul or mind and each person's experience on this earth is merely a shaping or completion of his soul or mind. The human soul, when the body dies, if its earthly experience has been sufficient to fit it for the life beyond, then takes a great step forward toward an existence which might be termed the cycle of supermen, she says.

Horoscopes Helped Discovery

Miss Miller made her discovery of the existence of the two new planets by observation of the horoscopes of many persons. Each astrological analysis indicated to her mind that something was lacking in the horoscope of each individual which could only be accounted for by the influence of two other planets regulating birth and rebirth. Thus it was that she determined that Tasmu and Eslar are constantly influencing human life, although they have never been revealed to the eye of man. That the presence in the universe of these planets unbeknown to science, is not only possible but probable is shown, she says, by the fact that Uranus and Neptune were not discovered until 1871, about 3000 years after the division of the time into years and months and days, and after the discovery of Halley's comet and other wonders of the firmament. Even without figuring the attraction of these two mighty planets astronomers were able to compile the accurate knowledge their patient observation and calculation discovered.

Even discovering a planet, however, might be compared to finding the proverbial needle in the haystack when the immensity of space is considered. Prof. J. S. Plaskett, of the British Columbia Observatory, recently found a new double star which was called Plaskett in honor of its discoverer which is computed to be 52,000,000,000 miles from the earth. And the more recent discoveries of nebulae and the proportions of the large Magellanic Cloud illustrate even better the almost incomprehensible dimensions of space. This Magellanic Cloud is visible from the southern hemisphere and resembles the Milky Way. Observations of it were made the past summer at the Arequipa station of the Harvard College Observatory in Peru. New variable stars and 2000 new nebulae were located. And the linear diameter of this cloud was fixed at 15,000 light years. The cloud itself is 110,000 light years distant from the earth. A light year is 6,000,000,000,000 miles or the distance traversed by a ray of light traveling at the rate of 186,000 miles a second for a calendar year. Observers of the Milky Way familiar to folk in the northern hemisphere report from the Harvard Observatory, at Cambridge, Mass., that the farthest known outposts of the heavens is some two quintillion miles away from the earth.

Tasmu, says Miss Miller, just now is in the last degree of Leo and verging on the cusp of Virgo. It is of tremendous size and makes a solar revolution only once every 200 years. Eslar is between Tasmu and Neptune and is now posited in the sign of Libra, about 14 degrees of that sign. She claims that Tasmu is responsible for the eccentricities of Uranus, its vibrations acting through the four moons of Uranus and pulling that planet out of its course.

This is how Miss Miller explained her discoveries: "There is a law of analogy which is the Polestar of human intuition, which guides us and directs the path to all knowledge and certainty. This is the first principle which I adopted in my desire to ascertain the element of certainty which I found lacking in astrology. Following my method of reasoning by analogy, or correspondences, I engaged the ancient art of Numbers to work with. Solomon said: 'Number, weight and measure determine all forms. . . . Blessed is he who comprehendeth letters and numbers . . . Letters are numbers, numbers notions, notions powers, and powers are the Elohim.' (The Elohim are the Gods of Creation—or the Primitive Creative Principles in Nature.) I meditated upon the number 12. There are 12 hours on the face of a clock, 12 hours of daylight and 12 hours of night, 12 months to the year, and 12 Signs of the Zodiac. The analogical method, so well established by Hermes, recommends that we go from the known to the unknown.

Two Planets Missing

"Astronomers at first said that our Solar System consisted of seven planets. The Transcendentalists said that the seven planets were analogous to our five senses, plus Intelligence and Reason, those latter, according to the ancient Kabbalists, being the gifts of the two Lights—Sun and Moon. But I taking analogy a little further, and clinging to the known factor to trace the unknown, observed that we have five fingers to each hand—ten fingers in all.

"If then, Intelligence is fashioned after Light (the Heavenly bodies being original manifestations of Light in Nature), and form and faculties after Intelligence then the five fingers on one hand (say the right hand) must represent five known faculties and the five on the left hand, five latent, or unknown faculties. Has not time vindicated us in this when Uranus and Neptune came to light, Uranus in 1871 and Neptune later? This gave us instead of the original seven, which with the Earth made eight, 10 as follows: Sun, Mercury, Venus, Earth, Moon, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus and Neptune—taking them in their order from the Sun.

"This addition to the Solar System linked up the correspondence with the digits and with the Senses as put forth by myself, but I found that the two supra-normal faculties were not accounted for in this number. There should, therefore, be two other planets to complete the macrocosmic, if we are to judge, as all the greatest Minds of antiquity have advised, from the known to the unknown, the visible to the invisible, and in other words, from the microcosm Man, to the Macrocosm, the Universe. After a careful study of the Zodiac, the Planets ruling the Signs, and their unquestionable influence in her in life and destiny—after many horoscopes carefully studied out, and many tests of the results expected from this star or that in this Sign of the Zodiac or that, I found certain discrepancies and saw where only the existence of these two other planets could correct them."

"No—not so tight, Jerry!"

"Nancy! I thought you were dead!"

"Foolish of me to faint. But such a noise! Why you would come."

For a little while that was all, except that at last her arms around his neck, because of twine they would have been painfully tired. And so they rested, in the beneficent dark that erstwhile had been so full of terrors.

"Do you care a little?" he asked, trembling. Her arms she might have put around his neck out of fear.

"More than I ever thought I could for any man. But I didn't know for sure until they came to me with the lie that you were hurt. I thought you had been set upon again. Poor boy! you're going to have your hands full of me!"

It flashed into his head sprightly that it was well enough for the present to have his arms full of her, but he did not utter the jest; such words would be sacrilege. So another spell of silence ensued.

"Was it as dark as this when you kissed Jenny?"

Something in her voice told him that she was smiling. He blundered against her ear, her cheek, her nose—great blunders, however—before he found her lips. Then he leaned back happy and bewildered! She feared. The unbelievable had happened! He heard her laugh softly and contentedly; and he was never to know why.

All at once she pushed him aside and struggled to her feet. "That madman! What has become of him? Where is he? Can we leave?"

"He is waiting outside for us, Nancy. He is no longer mad, but a subject for all the pity you have in your heart. It is a long story. I may as well tell you now. Do you mind the dark?"

"No"—smiling again. "Mind the dark! I don't mind anything, not even the future. But, Jerry, you'll have to go to work."

It was his turn to smile. "I'll have a job tomorrow. Didn't I tell you last night that I had one? This story began many years ago."

"Where is your hand, Jerry?"

"Here."

Nancy was full of pity and tenderness; she would a ways be so for the unfortunate. To her, as to Bancroft, there was nothing repellant in the fact that Kennedy had killed a man and had spent years in prison for the deed. Tortured by the stupendousness of the calamity which had befallen him, he was not to be held strictly accountable for his immediate acts.

"We ought not to leave him alone tonight, Jerry. He might——"

"I am taking him home with us."

"The house we live in, that was once his. Is dreadful!"

"Will you marry me, Nancy?"

"I rather expect to, after having put my arms around your neck and invited you to kiss me."

Find the woman who does not, even in the great moment, rise superior over the man; who does not first recover poise and will. With man it is a stunning incident in life, he is astounded at his temerity, astonished at his success. With a woman it is an inevitable sequence bound to happen sooner or later so she s more or less prepared. But for all that it seemed to Nancy that her heart was filled with little singing birds. She was going to belong.

"But we'll have to wait a little while, Jerry. Mr. Mannheim has been very kind to me and I can't leave him until May, when my contract expires. And so I'm going to follow the footsteps of the Fellus girls—marry a millionaire!"

"I didn't want any false friends, Nancy. I'll wait. You shall go to Italy and study all you want to."

"No Jerry. Never any more of that nonsense. I want a home—that old house of yours in the village, the room with all those beautiful books and vases your father saved for his friend. I want to read that splendid letter. May I?"

"The moment we return."

"Have him in my room first. I'll get some tea for him. I'll play and sing from the opera, anything to keep his mind off himself. The poor unhappy man, through no fault of his own. But bear with me, Jerry, in the days to come. I'm often moody and crotchety. I am a foundling, I don't know who my people are and never will, and that makes me want to weep for this man who has lost everything on earth. I have brooded over my own story too much. Remember Thanksgiving? That night I told Mr. Craig I'd marry him and then I backed out. I told him that all I wanted was his money. I hurt him who had been kind to me. That's the kind of a girl I am. I'm not half as good as Jenny. When did you learn that you loved me? For sooner or later this question has to be asked.

"In the daylight he would have had to lie, I'm sure, but in the dark, how easy it was to tell the truth! "It will sound idiotic, maybe it is, but I loved you the night I kissed Jenny."

"Well, of all——"

"The poor devil!"

"What—Jenny?"

"No, no, Craig."

"I like to hear you take it, Jerry. It was hard to confess, even in the dark. But it's all I have to confess."

The man downstairs could wait; everything could wait; this hour would never be repeated. The crest of such a wave hangs but for a minute then arches back to ordinary

"The celebrated Nancy Bowman!" he said.

"Nonsense! I am like Koko in 'The Mikado':

> Wafted by a spearing pain,
> As sometimes she is in transport,
> To a height that few can attain
> Save by hard and weary exercise.

There again, I am queer. I should be mad, with joy, and I hate the whole business. What fun—talking in the dark like this!"

He began to wonder, and to worry a little, too. All this in the dark. What would be their sensations when they faced each other in the light? Wouldn't she become critical? Wouldn't she observe flaws in him she could not now discern?

"What is the matter?" she asked, as though his hand had translated his thought.

"Nothing."

"Tell me what is it?"

"You won't change your mind in the light?"

"Poor boy! Of course, not. I love you, Jerry, and I didn't love Mr. Craig. I wanted to get away from dreary back yards and clothes lines and the theater. I'll go in to Jenny and Mr. Kennedy may have my room. Yours is rather forlorn. That doorplate! And you must have believed your father a hypocrite! But I must read that letter. He didn't have anything to do with those scoundrels in the alley. He told me so. What a dear, lovable boy you are! Would you like to kiss me again? It's still quite dark."

It was not two flights of stairs that he led her down. He stepped from mountain peak to mountain peak, with all the clear winds of earth and sea blowing into his face. Nancy loved him!

The taxicab was at the curb, Kennedy waiting patiently inside.

"I'll have to put out the lights and lock up," he said. "It's a house I bought recently."

"Give me the key," said Bancroft, who was still a little doubtful. "I'll take care of everything."

"Very well," Kennedy agreed. Alone with Nancy, he said: "I'm sorry for my roughness to you. Will you forgive me?"

"To be sure I will. Jerry told me everything."

"He will always tell you everything," said Kennedy: "for he is the one human being I have ever known who has nothing to conceal. Never permit any blemish to fall upon the mirror of his heart. You love him?"

"Yes." It was strange, but the question did not embarrass her.

"I am glad. For some time I have known that he loved you. A little while gone I thought of dying, but no. The boy wants me, he says. I am bewildered. For years there has been in my heart nothing but venom, and now it is empty, of everything. I can't hate, and I can't love. I have emerged from my madness, but I am nothing. Perhaps you and the boy——"

"We will try with all our hearts."

"He told you that I have been in prison, that I have killed a man?"

"Yes. But you did not mean to. You were mad with grief; you weren't responsible for what you did. You wouldn't have gone to prison at all if you had told everything. Why did you keep silent?"

"I was mad, quite mad, and did not know it. I had only one idea, to get my hands around Silas Bancroft's throat. I suddenly became possessed of a profound patience, an infernal cunning. Nobody knew me. I wore a beard. I was going to play a trick on Mary, my wife. The court had to appoint a lawyer to defend me, which he could not do because I offered him no help. My sullen attitude impressed the jury unfavorably. I expected the sentence in the second degree, but they found me guilty in the first. I had struck the victim in anger. I was stupified for a few days. Fourteen years among the dregs. And all the while I was quite mad. Well, perhaps God will let me be now."

The quiet despair of the tone wrung Nancy's heart. "Please! You mustn't brood. There will be tomorrow."

"Ay for you two, but for me there never will be anything but yesterday. I am old and empty. But no more here comes the boy."

They heard Bancroft give directions to the taxi driver.

"To sleep under the old roof again! I wonder," mused Kennedy. "Ghosts everywhere, ghosts of faces, of music and laughter. Perhaps they will be kindly ghosts."

Bancroft got in, making Nancy sit between. He was transcendentally happy and he had to express aloud this happiness to keep his body from flying up through the roof of the taxi and vanishing into the ether. He said so. But underneath his bubbling nonsense was a serious purpose. For a long time to come Kennedy would brood over the death of Silas Bancroft. He would be eternally seeing Silas reach out toward him and die, himself a passive murderer. He had shocked Silas Bancroft to death; but any one of a thousand surprises would have shocked Silas Bancroft to death. The point was to make Kennedy accept this fact. Kennedy had brooded himself into one madness; he might easily brood himself into another—suicidal. Besides, he would now be drawing comparisons—Bancroft's loyalty as against his own, and finding his a flabby thing indeed. So young Bancroft was determined to keep by the man. If he saw that the son rejected the idea that murder had been done, eventually Kennedy might be made to do so.

Bancroft analyzed his thoughts carefully and found that there was no question other than sincerest pity for the man who father had so loved. The hell through which the man had passed! A weak man might have whimpered and gone on, but a strong man, vital in brain and body! Something had twisted in Kennedy's brain, under the terrific impact of his misfortunes, and only tonight had this kink straightened out. The letter had said that there were high and worthy qualities to love in this man, and these might be uncovered and their luster renewed by the process of time. So then, to keep close by until Kennedy had got some perspective. What a companion he would be. The Great Adventure company.

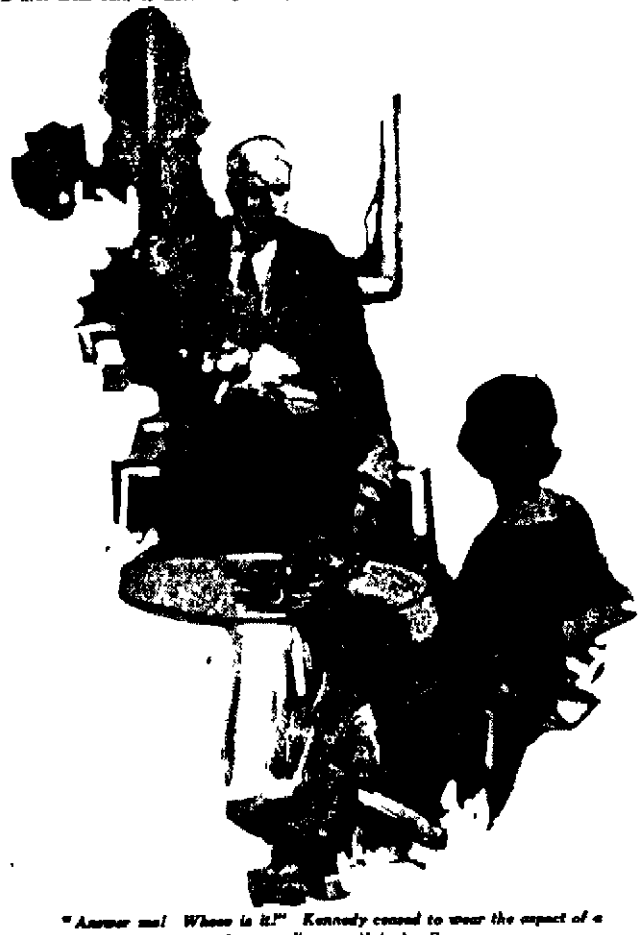
"Will you be wanting these books, sir?" he asked.

"No. They are yours. They mean a good deal more to you now than they do to me. But what became of your father's things?"

"Don't you remember? He said in the letter that he had to sell everything to make a new start."

"A new start."

There was a lull. Bancroft searched for Nancy's hand and found it. Then he fell to describing the adventure of the ambassador's suits, of his majestic sensations, of renting his first dress suit, of discovering Nancy's photograph, all interpolated by shrewd commentaries.



"Answer me! Whose is it?" Kennedy ceased to wear the aspect of a broken man; he was alive, terrifyingly alive.

Strange to state, Kennedy found this chatter amusing. The boy had the gift of describing things as they were, of tearing off the mocking and revealing the bones, but without the bitterness of the matured philosopher. Kennedy felt himself amused, and from this basis a thought began to work outward. If the boy could amuse him in this black hour, it might be that contact with the youngster would stir into life again all those attributes so long atrophied for want of usage. Of course, this inconsequent chatter was uttered purposely to divert a brooding mind but the point was, the ruse succeeded. Kennedy found himself amused.

"Jerry," said Nancy, "what's Jeremiah mean?"

"Hanged if I know."

"It means the Lord's anointed in his case," said Kennedy. "What it means in my case only God knows."

Nancy: what am I going to do? My father's letter—which is really the true will—orders that I pay over to Mr. Kennedy half of what I have, and he refuses it.

"And always will. I am no longer troubled by an obsession. I am troubled only by regret. When I came out of prison it was too late to pick up the truth and such was the power of my obsession I shouldn't have recognized the truth had I seen it. A little patience in the beginning and Silas and I might have worked together to retrieve our fortunes. But no. Battle, murder and sudden death. But always remember I went to prison for an act of my own; I shall not relate it to the original catastrophe."

"Sir, they are inseparable. On board the ship, before you put in, you were tremendously happy. You were, according to the market reports, a rich man, the years of bondage were over. From the peak of happiness to the bottom of despair, all in an hour or two, is more than any human brain can stand. Something became twisted in your poor head and only this night readjusted itself."

"But what confuses me is your attitude. You should hold me in horror."

"But there is always my father's letter, sir, his will that I should find you and help you if I could. That was enough for me. Besides, you were coming back on your own. Your original notion was to do away with me; in the end you demanded only what you considered legally yours. The part was comic book. You began, perhaps subconsciously, to see my father in me, when you were young. After all—ran your thought—I was guilty of nothing. So you would take what you considered yours, and vanish. The Great Adventure company! Don't you see, sir, that I am greatly indebted to you? You have indirectly given me more than I ever dreamed of having. If you had not lured me out of it I might still be in that village, whereas I come to the great city and found adventure and love."

Nancy, with passionate tenderness, pressed his hand. It came to her that she would always be two things in this boy's life—his mother and his sweetheart.

"Innocent bystanders," mused Kennedy. "All of us, every human being that lives, passively or actively innocent bystanders paying the price of another man's robbery half the time a man we never heard of."

"Do with me as you will," said Kennedy in complete surrender. "The Shadow was right."

"The Shadow?"

"For several days you were under constant surveillance. He warned me that I was underestimating you. And I told him not to think, thinking being my part. He fascinated her. This was the man who had stuck daggers into Jeremiah's doorjamb, and here were Nancy and Jeremiah fussing over him as though he were some long lost uncle returned!

"I pass!" said Jenny inwardly. Here, in Nancy's room, when he ought to be explaining to the police on an abduction charge!

Then her eyes strayed to Bancroft, thence to Nancy; but their faces offered no key to the riddle. On the contrary something on Bancroft's face, something on Nancy's softening in the way they were smiling at each other across the tea kettle made plain to Jenny that there had been a double adventure; for these exchanges were patently adoration. All the hope she had had, and so long as Nancy did not love Jeremiah there would be hope in Jenny's breast, flickered and died. They hadn't not even heard her enter or if they had considered the incident so ordinary that it wasn't worth the turn of the head. Jenny Malloy wasn't wanted here.

Jenny had never heard of the Iron Virgin of Nuremberg but for a [illegible] that she knew half dull iron spikes were being slowly pressed into her heart.

"Catch," she called and gaily. Bancroft turned and Jenny tossed the lemon. "See you later, Nancy. I'll leave the door unlocked. But don't wake me up if you can help it."

Jenny [illegible] closing the door softly not to mention the hard [illegible] never. Love. The poor kids who [illegible] fairly shouted it. Well, it was [illegible] the two human beings [illegible] never know what a [illegible] was. The rescue, harm [illegible] into Jeremiah's [illegible] going to be happy [illegible]. Tomorrow she would [illegible] right she wasn't proper [illegible]. When Nancy came in she would pretend to be asleep, no confidences as to how it happened. Jenny was wild to hear all about the man Kennedy; but she did [illegible] hear all about Jeremiah at the same time.

She paused before her mirror and offered her reflection a caustic smile, for Jenny had the virtue of sometimes seeing herself as others saw her.

"Poor nut," she said. "Then ain't that kid in Sunday school are in th' same boat. Our golden text is 'Them wot's got gits, an' them wot ain't got gits left.'"

Jenny undressed and went to bed, which is the one true compensation for all our petty ills. The only real magic in life is the pillow.

Kennedy began to talk, but to no end in particular, ramblingly.

"He called you Jeremiah, after me. The innocent bystander again. I hated it."

"Why, it's a beautiful name!" said Nancy.

"Then the incident is closed. This used to be the nursery," went on Kennedy dreamily. "Little dolls and cradles. Mary was just beginning to walk. The window with the stars, her mother used to call that one."

"The window with the stars," repeated Nancy. "What a poor thing I am, for I never saw anything out of that window but dingy yards and sodden clothes lines!"

Bancroft judged her and she understood that she was not to interpolate again. The casual tone in which Kennedy recalled the room was a good sign. They must let him run on as he pleased, anyway.

"The old roof. I was born under it. In those days it was quite fashionable down here. Mary, my wife, lived over in Washington place, and I used to go to her parties. I wore a white sailor collar, stiffly starched, and a blue polka dot tie. I met your father there and we had a fight over Mary in the conservatory. I won. Your father had a bloody nose and I a black eye, but I was stop of him when they pulled us apart. Later at college he saved my life while we were in swimming. There's a queer phase in saving people's lives. You're bound to watch over them forever after, as your father watched over me. Banky, old Banky, and he used to call me Chuck, but when he wanted to get a rise out of me he called me Jeremiah. He paused. Long [illegible]

"The [illegible] stars," thought Nancy, throwing a glance over her shoulder. Had she ever noticed the stars particularly? She wondered. She could visualize the mother with the little child in her arms, crooning a lullaby and watching the stars grow [illegible] the night deepened. What a [illegible] young man he must have been. Her heart was wrung again by the thought of what the man had gone through. The torturing memories of this moment, this house in which he had been born and known happiness. The mother and the child here in this room. The tender ghosts that he must be seeing.

"So he bought the house to hold it for me? And he did not have time to tell me. Your clerk was wrong. There were no high words. He put out his hands—to fend me off as I thought—and gave a great cry and fell upon his desk. God should have struck me down also. But your father was fit to die and I wasn't."

Kennedy let Ling Foo slide to the floor and began to move about, inspecting this object and that, to dike the crowding flood of memories. He was finally drawn to the Jaipur box as he would have been drawn toward any thing of beauty. His interest was only casual. The box was not valuable as a curio; there were thousands of them in existence. He opened it and saw the gold chain and broken locket and. There were millions of such things. Suddenly his voice shot across the room electrically.

"Where did you get this Jaipur box?" Tableau. Bancroft was stricken dumb by the resonant suggestion in Kennedy's demand and the vigorous expression of it while Nancy was hypnotized. The cup she was holding slipped from her hand and trickled and rattled as it shattered and rolled upon the floor. It seemed to her that thought was suddenly suspended, no longer here to command.

"Answer me! Whose is it?" Kennedy ceased to wear the aspect of the broken man; he was alive, terrifyingly alive.

"Patience, Mr. Kennedy," warned Bancroft, finding his voice.

"Patience? Well, yes, that is my—" Some of the tumultuous wind died of Kennedy's body. "But I demand to know how this box came to be in the possession of Miss Bowman."

"Why?" asked Bancroft, speaking for Nancy, who could not have uttered a word just then had her life depended upon it.

"Why? Because the box is mine, mine!"

"Nancy!" cried Bancroft, beginning to understand what was toward. He laid his hand on her arm.

The touch broke the spell. "It was with me when Daddy Bowman found me outside his door," she whispered, because even to whisper took all the strength she had.

"Don't you understand, Nancy?" said Bancroft, the blood thundering in his ears. "Mr. Kennedy is probably your father."

Probably. Kennedy let go the old ironic laugh that came from behind walls or out of caverns. "And I thought God was done with me. My daughter! How do I know? How does she know?" He laughed again.

Nancy heard her voice, it said: "I don't know. I don't know. But if that box is yours, it is also mine."

"On the flange is graven 'C. J. K., Jaipur, 1906.' Mary bought it on our honeymoon, and used it as a jewel box. That is my proof. Where is yours?"

Phantasmagoria. To Bancroft's vision Kennedy became something unreal, terrifying. To judge, to question, to doubt, in a moment like this, when the man sought to be on his knees, grateful to God for this miracle.

"I haven't any," said Nancy. "Was she real? Was anybody in this room real? Did the room itself exist?"

"Sir," said Bancroft, breaking the pause, "wouldn't you like this lovely girl for a daughter? No quibble. Look at her! She is more to you than an jewel that ever repposed in the box. What. Do you need lawyers and documents and courtrooms, when by a simple gesture God places her before you, your daughter? I believe in this miracle."

Kennedy's face softened and the smoking fire went out of his eyes. He laid aside the box and approached the bewildered Nancy, taking her face between his hands and considering the features one by one. In the end he dropped his hands and shook his head.

"No. There is no [illegible] sign," he said, his voice less [illegible] and sadly. "Nothing that reminds me of [illegible]."

"But [illegible] sir," said Bancroft, in all [illegible] was no longer any puzzlement [illegible] of you. She puzzled me that first night. Do you remember when you smiled at the chair? Well, the smile she [illegible] me was identical, but I did not know [illegible]."

This rather staggered Kennedy. He sat down heavily. "You don't understand. It would be easy to put my arms around this girl—for she is lovely—and call her my daughter. But if she weren't and then, just as my heart was full of her, to have her torn from me! You see, I'm a little suspicious of God as yet." He hid his face in his hands. "A Jaipur box and a smile! I've got to know!"

"Go to him," whispered Bancroft to Nancy. "In God's name, go to him! He is your father."

She hesitated but this hesitation was born of fear and unreality. This stranger, but lately a sinister shadow thrown across their lives—her father! He might be or he might not be. A Jaipur box and a smile! Where was that attribute men called instinct? Why didn't it tell her one way or the other?

"You too?" cried Bancroft, who could not understand why these two weren't in each other's arms. "Don't you want him?"

But does he want me?"

"Go and find out."

Suddenly the confusion went out of her and the weakness and she comprehended what fate intended her to do. There was no blinding revelation, no sudden born love but there was pity and out of this pity grew a hunger and a yearning. No one else would ever claim the Jaipur box. This man, whom misfortune had hammered into brass, was probably her father, but never would either of them be able to prove it. The box might not be hers, she might have been adopted from another house. Another house. She had been born in a house, perhaps. She had played with dolls in this room, perhaps. Her mother had sung to her by the window with [illegible]. Always and ever pity. [illegible] man's gold and here were [illegible] Kennedy and knelt with the [illegible] through a rehearsal of [illegible] theatricals.

"Wonder [illegible] began, and we should never know an [illegible]. But what other chance have [illegible] of finding your daughter? What [illegible] to her? The box was found with no [illegible] of man's [illegible] abandoned by heaven who were afraid to go on with their crime for some reason. Suppose I come from the same house as he [illegible]? God can answer the question. And He may [illegible] perhaps in the days to come [illegible] over [illegible] seems [illegible] were [illegible] Mary's [illegible] there a coil [illegible] in my [illegible]. If I accept you as my father I shall never accept any other man. Do you want me."

"Do you want me?" repeated Nancy, forcing herself into his arms.

The mists [illegible] the loveliness, the soft velvet of her eyes. Suddenly Kennedy took her into his arms, crushing her into breathlessness. The miracle was revealed to them both in that embrace. Never any more doubt, wonder, question; father and daughter so long as life existed. Nancy knew now her name was Mary Kennedy and she had this minute come home. As for Kennedy, the marrow in his bones grew warm and he knew that there was no more emptiness within him, but brimming life.

Forgive me. I have doubted everything on earth, and God handed My Mary's girl to hold something sweet and living in these empty arms once more."

With kindling eye Bancroft approached. This particular branch of The Innocent Bystanders, Unlimited, had liquidated its affairs; but the Great Adventure company would go on forever.

Presently Nancy's free arm reached out across her father's shoulder, toward Bancroft, who understood by this gesture that he, too, had come home.

It's the Boy Scouts who have taken over Italy

Mussolini: Who He Is, and the Remarkable Population of Youths and Striplings Who Have Backed Him in Running Their Country

By Russell S. Sims

IN THESE post-bellum days of political uprisings it is not surprising that the Boy Scouts should see their opportunity and have a try at doing that which their elders have shown themselves incapable of accomplishing—maintaining a proper respect for civil authority. But first they must be given the proper authority. In Italy now it is the Boy Scouts, principally, who have undertaken this job.

A Parliament, so divided against itself that communism and industrial disorder for long have been gaining the upper hand, failed miserably to restore order after the war. The Cabinet likewise failed to check the inroads of Leninism and virtually admitted its inability to cope with the situation by resigning. A wholly outside influence—the youth of Italy, as embraced in the disbanded veterans of the World War and many others sympathetic toward their after-war problems of rehabilitation—began to assert itself in the form of an organization recognizably similar to that of the American Legion. Some observers have gone so far as to liken the Italian Fascisti to the Boy Scouts, and there seems to be basis for the comparison. The Fascisti as mobilized at the close of the war is composed of boys and young men in their teens, twenties and thirties. Many never saw service in the war; many did. Many more joined the ranks of the Fascisti because of the definite program given them by one Benito Mussolini, the young deputy and editor from Milan. This program called for the repression, first, of communism or industrial revolution. Achieving this object in four years' time, the Fascisti—for whom is the other name of "Italy's Law and Order Radicals"—forced themselves on the Latin imagination to the point where, in October, their aggressive leader was invited by King Victor Emmanuel to form a new ministry in succession to the one which went out of office with Premier Facta several weeks previously.

Thus a revolution against a revolution was concluded. Will the results endure? Can a bloodless revolution be successful in the long run?

The answer appears to rest with Mussolini, who has been both the inspiration and the creator of the Fascisti and is now Italy's new Premier with a tremendous and growing force of public opinion already behind him. A man who knows neither fear nor personal ambition; who, though the son of a poor ironworker, is regarded by those who know him intimately as an aristocrat of aristocrats, combining the power of Napoleon with the vigor and zeal of Theodore Roosevelt—this is, briefly, Mussolini.

RICHETTO CANUDO, the founder of the Pan-Latin League and a friend of both Mussolini and D'Annunzio, makes the following observation on Mussolini's rise:

"The success of the Fascisti is due largely to Mussolini's organizing ability, but above all it is due to his genius for expressing in acts the sentiment of the majority of Italians. The keynote of Mussolini's appeal touched the inbred Roman feeling for order. The fact that the Fascisti attacked and defeated communism when it seriously menaced the future of Italy and aroused Moscow's highest hopes was sufficient to warrant popular confidence in Mussolini.

"The most striking result of the Fascisti campaign, so far as the rest of the world is concerned with Mussolini's success, is the complete overthrow of bolshevism, which not long ago threatened to overthrow Italy and would have given Lenine what the Red dictator has always maintained was essential to the success of the Red International movement—Bolshevik revolution in another great nation. Although Mussolini was the instigator and manager of D'Annunzio's occupation of Fiume, there is no danger now of any Fascisti military expedition in the direction of Jugo-Slavia—not even to Fiume.

"The people may criticize Mussolini because of his changes in politics, but such criticism will come only from people who are too stupid to alter their own views. The Fascisti leader has been big enough to recognize the dominating trait of Latin character. He appealed to the Roman love of order with a capital 'O'—the Latin order as opposed to the German organization. I mean by that the sentiment our Latins have for order rather than the practical application of it."

The new Premier is not an aristocrat in the sense of lineage, but his followers ascribe to him a true aristocracy of character and intellect. He has been a school teacher, an editor, a writer of bitter romances and other stories. As a young man in his twenties, he followed various trades, roving and getting to know people and life at first hand. This experience, added to a university education that prepared him for his profession as a teacher, doubtless had much influence on his political tendencies, which, until the war, were of a radical nature. Before the war he was a prominent leader of the Socialists—the very element that he has, since the war, combated at every opportunity, sometimes with his army and forcible methods, sometimes as a Deputy for Milan, his home city, in Parliament.

But he supported the war zealously, came to repudiate the Marxist dogma, and maintained that the state must not be the appanage of any one class, whether proletariat or bourgeois, that the state belongs of right to the nation as a whole.

MUSSOLINI is so closely identified with his party, Fascismo, that to speak of his party or of Fascisti in a general way is to speak of him, for he is both the party's founder and its autocrat, though he is not given to volubility. Besides their determination to secure freedom of speech and freedom in voting, the most important practical points in the Fascisti's political program were: First to develop production by fostering co-operation and good will in agricultural and industrial enterprise between the capitalist, the technical expert and laborers; second, to limit the extension of governmental activity beyond what they consider to be its proper sphere. They believe in and advocate private ownership of utilities, such as, for example, railways and telephones. They contend that the monopolizing of these by the Government must lead to inefficiency, waste and corruption in politics. In this respect they have been likened to the disciples of Herbert Spencer, who would reduce the functions of a state to that of a policeman, leaving all other activities to individual initiative.

It was as the editor of Popolo d'Italia following the Armistice that Mussolini began the organization of Fascio Nazionale dei Combattenti, or National League of Fighters. The organization came to be called Fascisti, the plural of Fascista, meaning an individual member of the band that derives its name from "fasces," or bundle of rods bound around the ax, which is the ensign of Roman justice.

Signor Mussolini is as effective with the pen as he has shown himself to be with the sword. The articles in his Milan newspaper, though never more than a column in length, are as deadly to his political enemies as the rapier. The man at whom the article is directed becomes politically non-existent. Because of this effectiveness in newspaper polemics, he has been obliged to fight numerous duels. He is said never to provoke a duel intentionally, but when he is challenged fights with the utmost readiness. Having been challenged, he has the time fixed for the encounter by a subordinate. When the hour arrives, if he is writing one of his articles, the subordinate jogs his arm and remarks: "Signor Mussolini, it is time." Mussolini grabs his coat and hat and is off to the scene of the engagement.

Italy's "Scout Master"—and Premier

It is related of the new Premier that upon beginning his political activities after the war, his presence to take charge of a situation was frequently required on very short notice. To save time, he learned to pilot an airplane. Acts such as these are characteristic of the man and fighter.

In point of age Mussolini is by fourteen years the youngest Premier Italy has had since the country's unification. He has been a member of Parliament only a year and a half. Many a conqueror has entered Rome, but probably none has ever been received with greater acclaim. In honor of their leader, the Fascisti ordered all stores and shops to close and street cars were stopped. Thousands of people were at the railway station to await his arrival there on October 30. The revolution was at an end. Communism had been crushed and all was now over but the shouting.

"From this moment Mussolini is the Government of Italy," proclaimed the Fascisti manifesto on that day. "He is now responsible for the safety of the State, of the Ministers and of Parliament. Any act against the Government institutions would be rebellion against Mussolini."

And delirious enthusiasm greeted the new Premier's pronouncement from a window of his hotel following an hour's conversation with the King.

"Today Italy has not only got a Cabinet but she has also got a Government, a strong Government, such as she has needed for many years past but never obtained."

The ministry as announced reveals the temperate, or rather moderate, course of the Fascisti's chieftain. Not only are all the members of the new ministry not Fascisti, but several were known as strenuous enemies of Fascismo. The new Cabinet has seven Fascisti, five Nationalists, one Democrat and one member of the Catholic Party. The intention thus has been to form a government representing all party groups in the Chamber of Deputies, with the Fascisti in control.

Five sovereigns of the House of Savoy have abdicated in the past for the safety of the nation, but King Victor Emmanuel has not. On the contrary, he recognized the growing popularity of the Fascisti as led by Mussolini and actually invited their chief to form a new Cabinet.

The love of Fasciamo for republican America was emphasized in a little incident that occurred during the celebration on October 29 near Rome. Both regulars and Fascisti bore themselves with marked graciousness toward foreigners, doing their utmost to alleviate the inconvenience caused by the strict orders given the populace for discipline. As an automobile, the occupants of which were Americans, approached the town of Bracciano that evening, a bright young corporal leaped onto the car to escort it safely across the town. The citizens, under the impression that the occupants were under arrest, jeered them until the corporal explained that the passengers were Americans. Immediately the jeering turned into cheering and it was "Viva America" over and over.

Like D'Annunzio, who is seen as a large factor in the success of the Fascisti, Mussolini is of the intellectual, idealist type. With him one can discuss the literature of all languages, for he has studied them in their native tongues. He can talk of frescoes in Etruscan tombs and he is a lover of music and art.

Of his followers—estimated at between 700,000 and 1,000,000 before the King's invitation to him to form the new Government—Mussolini, who is six feet tall and of athletic build and therefore an ideal type physically as well as intellectually to command such a following, says:

"What a splendid sight and what a great hope and power—these young men of the best type. They are enrolled from the ages of fifteen to thirty-two. Youth is the best power today."

OF ROMAGNAN birth and the son of a Socialist, Mussolini is proud of the fact that his father was a laborer. "He was an ironworker. Don't forget that," said Mussolini.

When the German Socialists stood by the "vaterland" at the inception of the Great War, Mussolini appealed to the Italian Socialists to enter the war on behalf of their country. Their refusal led to his break with the party and his becoming the super-Nationalist.

The circumstances of this break with the Socialists were the iron horses upon which the future Premier of Italy was to ride to power. The incident of his being read out of the party he was then affiliated with and of which he was one of the mainsprings as an editor and critic probably reveals the character of the man more than any other single development of his career.

He had unexpectedly entered the meeting which was to read him out, strode down between hostile rows of Socialists determined to eject him and mounted the platform to face them. They began to shout him down. He found it impossible to be heard. Fully alert to the situation and his fury up, he began his onslaught with such vigor that, unmindful of the gestures he was making, he brought his fist down on the table with such force that a water glass thereon was shattered and his hand severely cut. Instantly he raised his hand for silence. At the sight of the blood his audience began to subside. Then Mussolini opened an attack on his listeners which in their stupefaction none had the boldness there to openly resent.

MUSSOLINI'S authority today is undisputed, just as his leadership of Fascismo is undisputed. The members of that youthful society have gone home, obedient to the mandate of their leader, in whom they have sublime confidence and for whom their respect has never waned. By restraining his followers at a time of triumph, Mussolini has added another unique achievement to his most significant one.

"Please emphasize that we are not anti-proletarian," he said to an interviewer. "Our policy in internal affairs will be one of strict economy, discipline and the restoration of finances. The Fascisti movement, which began as bourgeoise, now has become syndicalist, but of national syndicalism, taking into account the interests of workingmen and those of employers and producers. Our movement could not be stopped, not only because of our strength, but because of our right."

Nothing is more indicative of the strength of Mussolini than this: He conceived an idea, developed it and carried it out himself.

How "Fiddlin' Jim" Armour Expiated the Crime of Benedict Arnold

By H. Sargent Appleton

JAMES ARMOUR, JR.
1756-1828
REVOLUTIONARY SOLDIER MARRIED A SISTER OF
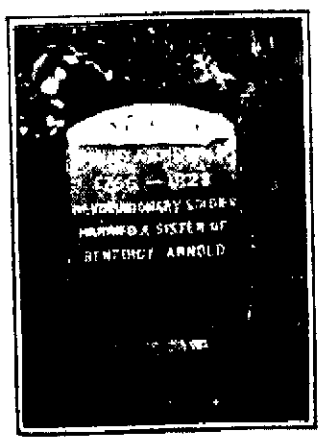
BENEDICT ARNOLD

THIS inscription on a small stone slab by the side of a lonely country road in Union, Connecticut, marks the resting place of Benedict Arnold's brother in law, a revolutionary soldier of tremendous patriotism who sought in every way to expiate his brother-in-law's treachery. But of greater interest is the fact that he was the eldest son of James Armour, founder of the Armour family of meat packing fame, who settled in Union, in 1747.

James Armour, Sr., a Scotch Presbyterian first settled in Philadelphia, but moved to Union in about 1747, when he married Margaret Anderson, who had inherited some land there on the death of her father. This land had been acquired by her father when thirteen parcels, approximately 12,500 acres, were sold to individuals for a total sum of about $1400 by a committee "appointed and empowered by the General Assembly of His Majesty's Colony of Connecticut, at their May session in 1719, to sell certain lands for the raising of money for the encouraging of Yale College."

It was rough timbered land, and as a report of the town of Union dated 1776 and addressed to the General Assembly of Connecticut says: "The snow comes early in the fall and lies late in the spring, and generally speaking the township is rough, rocky, mountainous, with numerous swamps in all parts of town that breed vermin." Not the sort of land to inspire a man to farm, but James Armour was a Scotch pioneer of enormous strength and faith, and was accustomed to tell his neighbors, "I was born on Sunday morning, baptized before 8 o'clock, and devil a bit of any disease would ever light on me."



With the seal of the other pioneers Armour cleared enough land for a small farm and left the rest of his property in pine, for lumbering formed a most profitable part of farming in Union in those days. The high rocky land didn't yield enough fodder to keep a large amount of stock, and going to market meant driving by ox-cart to Hartford forty miles away, or even to Providence or Boston. Yet on the scanty farm land he had cleared, James Armour lived and raised his eight children.

In a letter of a neighbor at that time, we find this reference to "Jim" Armour: "Pigs is runty and taxes high, but Jim's pigs does well," says the letter. Now that old neighbor would open his eyes if he could see the pigs at Jim Armour's great grandson's plant in Chicago today.

One hundred and seventy five years have passed since Armour cleared his little holding, but strangely enough his farm looks much today as it did then.

James Armour, Jr., the eldest son, was just twenty when the call to arms came from Lexington. The hurrying messenger passed through Union on his way to Hartford early on the morning of April 20, 1775, and by sunrise of the 21st young Armour, with seventeen others of the little town, was on his way to Cambridge to enlist in the Revolutionary Army. Such was the spirit of the day. Young Armour served for seven months at Cambridge, the old records show and then returned to help his father on the farm, bringing with him as his bride Eunice Arnold, the sister of Benedict Arnold.

IN 1777 he was again called to the colors when the Union company went for two months to the defense of New London, but, in 1781 came Armour's great chance. On a drab September evening word came to Union of the treacherous attack by Benedict Arnold on the garrison at New London, and the first man to report for duty in the town was young Jim Armour, hoiling to avenge the treachery of his brother-in-law. The Union company reached New London, forty-five miles away, in one forced march, only to find that the garrison had been massacred and the British retired to their ships. The company stayed around New London for a month and a half and then returned to Union.

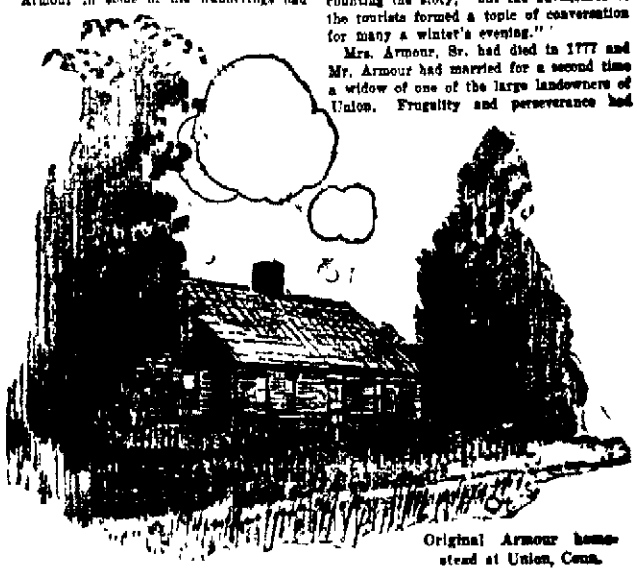
Perhaps Jim had inherited the wanderlust of his grandfather, who had gone to sea years before, or, perhaps like many soldiers of the late World War, he found it hard to settle down to the monotonous life of the farm after serving in the army. At any rate, he and an army comrade conceived the idea of touring the battlefields of the Revolution. But no tourist bureau with a fleet of rubberneck wagons "direct to the battlefields" toured the rocky roads of New England in those days and most of the roads could only be navigated by stout two-wheeled carts. Accordingly Armour and his friend made themselves a good two-wheeled cart and hired a strong farm horse of a neighbor for the sum of a dollar for the trip.

Unfortunately, perhaps, for the sightseers their stupendous pension of $7 was due them in Hartford, and so they first headed for Hartford, forty miles away. This princely sum was to pay all their expenses on the tour. But rum, even in those days, cost money and the story goes that they spent their pension in a "riotous revel." They started out from Hartford on their tour penniless.

Armour in some of his wanderings had learned to play the fiddle and armed with this accomplishment as a financial backing they toured the battlefields of New England. This creaking two-wheeled cart and lumbering farm horse of the first American battlefield tour is indeed a different picture from the tour last summer of the American Legion.

The tour had started with the idea of lasting about a week, but it was two months later when the tired farm horse pulled the creaking cart back to Union. "My grandfather used to say that the horse looked kinda thin," Mr. Moore, a descendant of the neighbor from whom the horse was borrowed, told me the other day when recounting the story, "but the adventures of the tourists formed a topic of conversation for many a winter's evening."

Mrs. Armour, Sr. had died in 1777 and Mr. Armour had married for a second time a widow of one of the large landowners of Union. Frugality and perseverance had made Armour one of the successful farmers of the vicinity, and his two sons, David and John, were able assistants of their father. Jim, however, we are told liked to fiddle better than farm.



Original Armour homestead at Union, Conn.

Every October Jim Armour went to Hartford to get his pension; every year he hired a horse of neighbor Moore; and every year he returned to Union minus his pension and filled with rum. This annual party was as regular as the coming of Christmas, and no one seemed to raise it better than Jim himself, for after the first trip he always arranged to pay the horse hire in advance, for he knew that he would come home without it.

In the early days of the nineteenth century several of the men of Union went to newly opened farm lands in Genesee County, New York, and their glowing descriptions of the country led many others to follow. The Armours were among these and in 1820, John Armour and his wife moved to Smithfield, N. Y., and David and his wife to Genesee County. The fertile farm lands of Western New York were more profitable than the rocky hillsides of Union, and the Armours prospered.

However, the pioneer blood flowed through the veins of the family and we find, with the opening up of new lands in the West, Danforth Armour of the next generation moving on for new worlds to conquer. His organizing of Armour & Co. and its huge success are too well known to be recorded here.

On his deathbed in 1885, he asked that his body be taken back to Union for burial—not to be buried in the old cemetery on the top of the hill back of the meeting house, but on the old farm that he had loved so well.

So, today, almost a hundred years later, in the heart of the Connecticut hills his lonely roadside grave with the stars and stripes floating above it looks down on his beloved farm.

The Wonder Kids Who Rule Present-Day Athletics

A Survey of the World Championships Now Held by Boys and Girls Still in Their Teens

By J. C. Kofoed

In Almost Every Line of Endeavor the Verve and Dash of Youth Lift Their Possessor Over the Heads of Competitors and Send Him Under the Wire a Flushed Victor

The Juvenile Columbuses Put Off From Shore, With Hopes Undashed by the Bitter Experiences Mature Years Know, and Their Very Ignorance of Perils Seems to Insure Them Against Disaster

BROMIDE is oftentimes a truth that is talked about so much that it has become trite.

"Youth must be served" is about as trite a phrase as the writer can dig out of his vocabulary, yet within the last few years it has superseded all others in the phraseology of sportdom.

And the reason?

Because in the last few years bounding, vibrating youth has pressed more to the front than ever; not youth as we looked at it a few years back—the champions of twenty-five and six—but youngsters on the obverse side of twenty-one.

They crowd up toward fame, blotting out the deeds of the older masters by flaming deeds that bring gasps of admiration. Every day these striplings are breaking records at which another generation gazed upon with awe.

In the water, on the links, the diamond, the tennis court, the track, the prize ring—they swarm everywhere. Their name is Legion, and their middle names is Darts and Darts!

When it comes to swimming there never has been any one so fast as Johnny Weissmuller. He has smashed nearly every record that can be broken. It was not so long ago that Duke Kahanamoku was regarded as the acme of perfection—a sort of human dart. Yet Weissmuller broke the Hawaiian's records one after the other with consummate ease. And Johnny is just nineteen years old.

"He is the greatest swimmer that ever lived," said the Duke. "I have never seen his equal, and I never expect to see it. I was used to think I was pretty fast—" and his swarthy face lit with a smile—"but I am an old, spavined ice-wagon horse compared with him."

Gertrude Ederle is the newest of the women swimming sensations. She is the Johnny Weissmuller of her sex and her speed is almost uncanny. And Young Miss Gertrude has yet to see her twentieth birthday. Then next in line comes Helen Wainright, champion fancy woman diver. Yet even is "woman" by courtesy only, since she was barely fourteen when she went to Paris to compete in the Olympic games. Fourteen, and an international star! Here is youth with a vengeance. When adolescence can step into the arena and demand maturity it is time to admit that youth is being served a larger portion of success than it ever had.

YET fourteen is not the deadline for athletic success. Georges Carpentier in his Lens, my little coal-mining home at Lens was only thirteen when he went forth with Francois Deschamps to fight his first battles in boxing and become the greatest fighter ever developed in the land of the Gauls. Other great figures have started at the tender years when most boys are in high school. That caveman, Sam Langford, was fourteen when he won his first fame; so was little Johnny Coulon, one of the greatest bantamweights that ever lived. And Ted (Kid) Lewis had just reached his fourteenth birthday when he sank his first blows into his opponent's midriff.

Switch to the tennis courts and still we find youth triumphant. There Vincent Richards, who, at nineteen is one of the highest ranking players in the land is a most interesting figure. At fifteen he was a national champion. Still in his teens he dethroned that splendid veteran, Watson Washburn, off the Davis Cup team, and became an internationalist.

Paired in the doubles, with Bill Tilden, against Pat O'Hara Wood and Gerald Patterson, he showed to far greater advantage than the world's champion. His volleying was only surpassed by Wood. At the net he met the brunt of the Aussie attack, putting his racquet on the ball at times when it seemed utterly impossible.

Physically he looks to be anything but the super-athlete. He is thin, almost frail, a flaxen-haired youngster, rather stooped in the shoulders, with an air of listlessness that is absent when he is on the court. He was twelve years old when he took up tennis, thirteen when he won his first tournament. At fifteen he was the national junior champion, and at nineteen a Davis Cup internationalist.

In France Henri Cochet, still on this side of twenty-one, has been a star at the net for some years, and is one of the backbones of the French Davis Cup team.

On the golf links—in spite of the fact that the brawn and bonnie game has been dubbed an old man's relaxation—the preponderance is still more strongly in favor of youth.

All three of our champions are still kids in the eyes of the middle-aged. Winsome Glenna Collett, with her pretty face and twinkling eyes and mannish driving power, came to a championship through a field that contained women two and three times her age—women who were veterans of tournaments played before Glenna was born.

Opposed to her among the others were Miss Dorothy Campbell Hurd, Mrs. Ronald Barlow, seven times Eastern champion; Mrs. Chick Fox, dean of all women golfers, who qualified in national tournaments eight years before slender Glenna saw the light of day—a score of other veterans far her senior in age and experience.

Yet she won the highest honors in woman's golf, just as Jesse Sweetser, at twenty, captured the title of amateur champion of the United States. Sweetser is a student at Yale, yet he achieved a feat at the Country Club of Brookline that has no equal in the annals of golf in this country.

He defeated Bobby Jones in the semi final and Chick Evans in the final round of the tournament at Brookline, after having worked his way through the field by a magnificent display of golf.

Jesse started playing when he was eleven years old, and at the age of fourteen was shooting consistently in the low 70s around the Normandie course. He was just twelve when Chick Evans came to St. Louis, and it was from that master of golfing style that the new champion got his first lesson in mashie play.

"I copied him as much as I could, and I haven't changed very much since then. Later I learned a thing or two from Bobby Jones." And it was on the prostrate forms of Evans and Jones that Jesse Sweetser stepped to the highest honors in amateur golf.

Jones himself, by the way, is only twenty and a freshman at Harvard, but he is conceded by every professional who has ever seen him play to be the finest stylist in the whole realm of the game. True, he was beaten by Sweetser in the national championship, but he is not a whit inferior to that star.

Then add to the triumvirate of champions the name of Gene Sarazen. Here we have a cocky little youngster, as courageous and able a player as ever won an open championship. He learned his game as a caddy, not having the advantage of wealthy parents like Sweetser and Miss Collett. His first strokes were taken with home-made clubs. But he studied and practiced continually, and this year has been a continuous succession of triumphs.

He won the open the Southern and professional golfers' championships. He defeated Walter Hagen in a seventy two hole match for the championship of the world while suffering from an attack of appendicitis.

Baseball, now. It seems that the veterans are the outstanding lights of the game, but the most promising pitcher in Henson Brillheart, of Washington, a schoolboy of eighteen, who is already matching his strength and skill with that of the greatest players on the diamond. And you might remember that Ty Cobb—the greatest ball player that ever lived—was only sixteen years of age when he started on his professional career, and was less than nineteen when he entered the big leagues.

YOU may also recall that Waite Hoyt, hero of the World Series of 1921, came to fast company when he was a shade under seventeen, and was hailed everywhere as the schoolboy wizard. As fast as an old-timer steps off into the shade with his battered old glove in his hand, some fresh faced youngster, bubbling with vitality and confidence, comes charging out into the sunlight to take his place.

What is it that makes these youngsters champions at such tender years?

Weissmuller and Sweetser are physically powerful but it isn't strength. Glenna Collett isn't nearly so big and strong as some of the women she defeated, and Vinnie Richards is frail.

It is rather a superabundance of youth, the terrific concentration of effort—of sustained effort—that youth alone is capable of.

England presents an exception to the rule of youth, probably because the Mother of Nations has slipped so gracefully in athletics. Wethered, the amateur golf champion, is a young man, but some years the senior of Sweetser. George Duncan, the best of the younger professionals, is no child in years. Polo is still carried on by such veterans as Major Lockett, and England cannot match a Hitchcock or a Strawbridge or Hanford, such as we can show among our very young polo players.

But youth in England will undoubtedly take a hand very soon, as it has done in other lands. The love of athletic sport is too deeply rooted there to stay permanently in the mire of defeat. And when the renaissance comes there look to see it led and fostered by the "children," the super stars of seventeen, eighteen and twenty.

The dominance of youth has not been confined exclusively to the realm of muscle. Literature has received a very definite impetus from those seekers for truth and beauty who are still on the sunny side of twenty-one.

The youngest of them is Hilda Conkling, who at fifteen has gained a foothold on the ladder of fame and publicity. Her mother was a poetess of note, and Hilda had the advantage of heredity and environment to enable her to come so quickly to the fore. Her last book of verse created something of a furore.

It was Hilda who inspired the comment of that keen satirist, Dorothy Parker, that it won't be long before contributors visit the editorial offices on kiddie cars.

Perhaps so, and yet these youngsters are bringing into literature the same nerve and spirit that the newer breed of champions has given to sports.

The best known of the younger writers is F. Scott Fitzgerald, the historian of the flapper and the equal of Booth Tarkington in recording the soul stirrings and conversations of the younger generation.

Fitzgerald, the debonair and self confident young graduate of Princeton, was already becoming known to the public before he left the Jersey university's classic campus. He has shown a magnificent sense of phrasing, a cleverness of plot, a phonographic ability to record the talk of those about him.

At an age when most young men are groping about to establish themselves Fitzgerald has already sipped deeply of the cup of success. He is famous, wealthy, married to the girl of his heart. What more could any man ask of the gods?

Among the younger women writers Dorothy Speare can be rated perhaps with Scott Fitzgerald. She at least writes of the same sort of people who intrigue him. It is true that she lacks much of Fitzgerald's vision and technique, but she has earned her spurs at an age when femininity's thoughts are usually centered on frocks and dances and bonbons.

Then there is the prodigy, Harry Harvey, whose "Caravans of the Nibbs" was written with such a sense of warm color and enthusiasm and with such a deftness at handling plot and counterplot that he won a most cordial welcome from critics.

The [illegible] of the artists is tremendous [illegible] back into babyhood to reach out for [illegible] Ashford and those other children [illegible] may not have written the things [illegible] to them.

In the field of criticism we can pick out John V. A. Weaver, who when still in his teens showed an excellent critical judgment and a caustic pen. Weaver is still a boy in years but he is known throughout the land, and his book "In American" at least aroused a mortal combat between other critics.

Weaver married Peggy Wood, the nineteen year old star of "Marjolaine," and thus united the youthful renaissance of literature and the stage. Of course, a paucity of years has never been a handicap in the realm of footlight and grease paint.

Peggy at nineteen and John at twenty-one have each achieved success in their chosen fields. Their combined ages is just forty yet how many men or women of those years have done as much in their span as these two youngsters have already accomplished?

AMONG the editors, John Farrar, of the Bookman, is perhaps best known of those at the tender age. Farrar went into editorial work in his teens, and his good judgment and writing ability have made his magazine a bigger power than it ever was. He is just a touch more than twenty-one now.

And then we must mention Stephen Vincent Benet for no story of the achievements of the rebellious youth of the period—youth breaking the shackles of age-old conventions—can be told without mention of him.

Now we come to the end of our story. This is the age of youth. It shows its heels to maturity in every race. In every phase of athletics, in literature, art on the stage, the boys and girls are pressing forward.

Coats for Day and Evening

They Drop to the Hem of the Frock, Wrap Snugly About the Figure, and May Be of Soft Wool or Fur.

The Famous Creator of Fashions

COATS are such uninteresting things," a client remarked to me. "Really, I hate to go in search of one. It's never like a frock one wants because it is pretty. It's something we must have for its warmth."

Of course, loving clothes as I do, I couldn't have her feel this way about anything into the making of which go the designer's art and time and care.

Clothing originally was adopted for warmth of course. The first clothes didn't consider beauty. The art of bedecking the body with attractive garments came later.

It's the same way with coats. Their purpose may have been utilitarian, as the client insisted, but long ago they learned to serve two masters at once. They still give warmth to the body, but they clever enough to do this witho' mak their mission obvious. Mor an this, they're really objects of beau within themselves, and you forget that y once existed solely for warmth and l tha' they were only meant to enhan you charm.

This is the conclusion my clie ched after looking at the beautiful wraps ad to show her. She selected not one. t two, for she wanted a coat for day a wrap for evening. And she threaten come back for one of my chic short jackets!

And if you must have a long coat these jaunty little box jackets are such a temptation! They hardly serve the purpose of a coat which envelopes you to the hem of your frock. Still they are so attractive you just can't pass them up. In fur or a heavy cloth material they are very practical at that, for you can wear them with any one-piece frock and you can also combine them with a sports skirt for wear on less formal occasions.

Coats Smart Though Warm

The daytime coats I'm showing here are such lovely things that you can think of them only as being ornamental—though in reality they are very warm!

The one at the right, as my manikin expressed it, is "too rich and Ritzy for words." The material is matelasse and the color is a most beautiful rich taupe. You really must see the fabric to appreciate it. The foundation is a sort of quilted silk, and above this the woolly figures make an attractive pattern. Wide flat braid striped in henna and yellow makes the foundation for the collar and cuffs, while over this dull gold braid traces a wiggly pattern. The coat is perfectly straight, one of the graceful all-enveloping kind which may be pulled snugly about the body. When it is slipped on or off, the heavy taupe charmeuse lining is revealed.

Notice the smart little hat which my milliner designed to go with it. The same taupe matelasse is used and the same dull gold braid traces a design over its turned-back brim. While many other hats may be worn with such a wrap, it's always well to have such a cunning little matching one. For motoring, or to pull down over your hair when shopping or going to tea, it's as smart as it is becoming.

Now the hat worn with the other cloth coat, while not of matching material, seems a part of the costume so well does it carry out the spirit of the coat. The hat is a soft little black velvet affair which rolls its brim back from the face in most becoming fashion.

Simplicity Marks Fur Wraps

"Alice," as the coat is called, is of dark blue material with a raised design in little squares which resembles nothing so much as the surface of a waffle. The coat is a perfectly plain straight affair like the former, but over this is made a jaunty short circular cape which gives it all the dash in the world. The cape comes over the sleeves, being attached to them down the underarm seam. Skunk is the fur used, and the cape is lined in blue charmeuse which has the narrowest of green and blue piping about its edges.

Now we come to the fur capes. The ermine one up at the left, of course, is for evening wear. The chinchilla is originally for evening, though it may easily be worn to the smart afternoon party. Both these capes are made plain and on straight lines, for I feel that furs so beautiful within themselves need no fancy treatment. The chinchilla wrap has its stripe running horizontally through the deep yoke and up and down through the lower part.

If you do prefer a wrap which shows lavish workmanship in the manipulation of furs, it can easily be had. Indeed, the remarkable progress in the treatment of pelts in the last few years has produced unbelievable results. The pelts are so much softer than they used to be that fur dresses, fur suits and wraps of beautifully worked designs are not out of the ordinary.

The first fur fashion show, staged in New York City, was a revelation to anyone who had not before been initiated into the furrier's lore. One wrap I particularly remember was an ermine model which worked its pelts out in delicate spider-web design. The web centred at the wearer's back and traced its intricate way out in all directions. And more remarkable still, the puffed chiffon lining followed the same spider-web design.

Many smart women, too, favor ermine-lined wraps to those which place their fur outward for the world to see. These are usually of black velvet, and there's something undeniably rich about the wrap, which is fur-lined.

Chinchilla, of course, speaks for itself. The lily needs no gilding, and a plain lining is often used, of a delicately beautiful lining of chiffon puffed over satin. Narrow gold braid often holds the puffs in place, or outlines the lining.

Notice the effective headdress worn with the coat of chinchilla. It's simply a wide band of velvet with a crescent and star ornament of brilliants. Yes, bandeaux for evening are as smart as they were last season. A wide band of velvet or of the frock material with an ornament perched somewhere at the front is smarter this season than the slender wreath which saw such popularity last winter.

Then again, the band may be a plain metallic affair which matches the metal cloth used on the dress. I have mentioned before the tissue turbans which found such marked popularity earlier in the season, and I may say that they continue to be among the very smartest. One wonders where the bobbed hair has gone. The smoothly wrapped turbaned heads which one sees everywhere in the evening tell no secrets, for not a single strand of hair escapes from beneath them!

The only thing which does show is the delicate lobe of a small pink ear. This might escape unnoticed if it weren't for the dangling earring which invariably accompanies it. These earrings grow longer and longer, and sometimes the effect reach to the wearer's shoulders.
